Give her your tired, your weary, your wounded

By Pat Paholsky

So far this year, Jan Gamber has taken in a sparrow, a pigeon and a blue jay -- all of which were either wounded or too young to survive without help. And after more than 20 years of nursing birds back to health, the Grosse Pointe City woman has

She picked up the blue jay, shown in the photo, while she was running at Windmill Pointe. Gamber, who is a self-employed wallpaperer and painter, was stopped by one of her customers who told her she had found a baby blue jay that she was afraid her dog would get.

"I finished my run and picked him up," Gamber said.

With some food and tender loving care, the bird made itself at home, flying free around the house and taking its daily bath in the kitchen sink.

And this jay knows how to save for a dry period. When it has eaten its fill, it hides the rest of its food in Michael Gamber's beard or ear. Or Jan Gamber's mouth, if it's open.

There are two cockatiels in the house and the blue jay mimics them, Gamber said. She thought it was ready to be released, so she let it go last Saturday.

"He was up in the tree, talking like a cockatiel and a neighbor was having a garage sale and he (the bird) was landing on everybody's head," she said. "I thought, this will never do. I'm going to have to work with him.

I might have to keep him all winter.'

The Gambers have taken the screen out of the top half of their door leading to an enclosed back porch "so he can fly in and out when he wants. Our house is always adapting to the animals," she added.

The sparrow was another story. Gamber's daughter brought it back after attending a wedding in southern Illinois.

See BIRDS, page 4A

Jay the Blue Jay might be saying: "Hmmm, no cavities" or "Where could I have left my glasses this time?" It's more likely, however, that Jay is hiding or looking for some food in Jan Gamber's mouth.

No liquor license for War Memorial

By Dan Jarvis Staff Writer

After a decade of trying, the Grosse Pointe War Memorial last week was denied a liquor license by the Liquor Control Commission.

John Stora, deputy director in charge of licensing for the LCC, said the license was denied by the full state Liquor Control Board for two reasons: Several conditions placed on the application by the Farms City Council are not enforceable by the LCC and there were numerous protests by residents in the area.

He added the LCC was preparing a report explaining the reasons for denial and that it would be forwarded to the War Memorial upon completion.

On April 17, the Farms City Council approved the War Memorial's request for permission to seek a liquor license from the state. In a 4-3 vote, the council approved the request, but placed several conditions on the liquor license, if it were approved by the state.

The conditions outlined the formation of a five-member advisory board including a church pastor, the Farms director of public safety and three qualified voters. Other conditions stated that the War Memorial have a no open-bar policy and serve alcohol up to maximum of 230 events per year and only to nonprofit groups and within limited hours.

Mark Weber, War Memorial president, said the conditions were not intended to be enforceable by the LCC but by the City Council.

Weber said the War Memorial and its supporters will continue to believe that the facility should be licensed by the state.

"We think the community agrees and we will continue to look at options toward gaining a license in the future,"

Paul Marco, an attorney and member of the Grosse Pointe Property Owners Association, a group opposing a liquor license at the War Memorial, said the LCC denial is in the best interest of the community.

"It won't hurt the operation of the War Memorial. They've been operating for 30 years without

South assistant principal heads off proposed hotel party by students

Normally, the tragedy and the blessing would have nothing to do with each other. Except in this case, the new father, a 32year old Wayne County assistant prosecutor, was handed the biggest case of his career: prosecuting Lawrence DeLisle on charges that he deliberately drove the family station wagon into the Detroit River in an attempt to kill his wife and four children.

His wife escaped injury. While the DeLisle case is the largest "media event" Simowski has handled in his seven years with the prosecutor's office, it is by no means the only important case he has handled.

Hear the candidates

The Grosse Pointe League of Women Voters will hold a series of Candidate Forums starting Oct. 24 to give voters in the Park, City, Farms and Woods an opportunity to hear and to question candidates who are running for municipal offices in the Nov. 7 election.

All forums will start at 7:30 p.m. as follows:

• Grosse Pointe Park, Tuesday, Oct. 24, Trombley

· Grosse Pointe Farms, Wednesday, Oct. 25, in council chambers

· Grosse Pointe Woods, Thursday, Oct. 26, at North High School

• Grosse Pointe City, Monday, Oct. 30, at Unitarian Church

The league also is publishing Voter Guides that include each candidate's answers to questions about where he or she stands on such issues as local housing and other programs for senior citizens; the future of municipal involvement in community recycling programs; and what he or she feels is the most pressing issue facing communities today.

At the forums all candidates will speak briefly, commenting on their answers in the Voter Guide and then will take written questions from the audience. Kay McDonald, co-president of the Grosse Pointe league, urges residents to attend the forums to become better acquainted with the candidates and with local issues. The basic belief of all leagues throughout the country is that democracy works best when there is participation in the governmental process by informed citizens,

A non-partisan organization, the Grosse Pointe league conducts candidate forums and publishes guides for all contested elections. Joanne Watko, voter service chair, and Pearl Warn. league membership chair, edited and compiled the current Voter Guide which will be available at no cost at local city halls, churches, libraries and other public buildings.

League members who will be moderators at the forums are Francis Schonenberg. Ginny McCaig and Barbara Thompson.

Membership in the league is open to all women and men who are 18 years of age or older. Anyone interested in joining should call 885-8077 for more information.

October 19, 1989 Grosse Pointe News News Casazza edges Gracey by 1 vote in re-cast of absentee ballots

Staff Writer

Incumbent Matthew Rumora will face challenger Eugene Casazza in the race for Grosse Pointe Farms municipal judge on Nov. 7.

In a primary which has defied all balloting procedures, Casazza won the right to appear on the November ballot by just one vote over his closest opponent, Paul Gracev.

And just moments after the votes were tallied by Farms election workers, Gracey said he is again challenging allegedly mismarked ballots.

Speaking on behalf of Gracey, attorney Lawrence Friedman said two ballots will be challenged for improper marking and one more will be challenged because the voter was allegedly identified through writing attached to the ballot.

City Clerk Richard Solak said the ballots were properly marked and the voter was not identified on the ballot.

Of the 315 absentee ballots sent out by the county, Solak said 265 were returned. One was discarded because the voter marked boxes for two candidates, Rumora and Richard Roosen.

Though the results of the new absentee vote remain unofficial until certified by a Circuit Court judge, Solak said Rumora received 149 absentee votes, bringing his total in the primary to 146. The total number of ballots sentee vote with the second, Cas-999 votes. Casazza received 28 absentee votes, for a total of 297. Both will appear in the general election, along with several candidates for City Council.

Gracey received 81 absentee votes, totaling 296, just one vote behind Casazza. Roosen received six absentee votes, bringing his total in the judicial primary to mora lost 35 absentee votes.

The new absentee vote was ordered by Circuit Court Judge Richard Kaufmann following a long series of legal actions by candidates Casazza and Gracey and the Wayne County Board of Canvassers.

At issue was illegal ballot handling by Gracey's wife, Irene. Mrs. Gracey was charged during the first week of October by the Wayne County prosecutor's office with illegal handling of absentee

Mrs. Gracey was arraigned Oct. 9 in the Grosse Pointe Farms Municipal Court before visiting Judge Frank Jeannette. She pleaded innocent on two counts of unauthorized possession of absentee ballots.

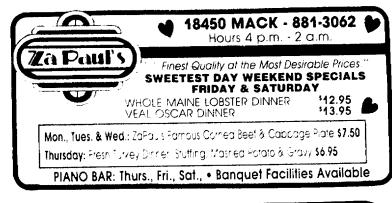

Following a Sept. 29 re-count of the absentee ballots by the county board as requested by Casazza, the board refused to certify the results, which were identical to the original count as certified by the state Board of Canvassers in mid-September.

Upon hearing of the new absentee vote order by Judge Kaufmann, Gracey filed a petition with the Michigan Court of Appeals, seeking to overturn the order.

Gracey charged that the county board re-counted the ballots, agreed that the original count was correct, but then refused to certify the vote, which would have placed Gracey on the November ballot along with the primary winner, Rumora. The new absentee vote places Casazza on the general election ballot, challeging Rumora for the judicial seat.

Casazza was unavailable for comment.

Radon is a colorless, odorless gas that is the second leading cause of lung cancer.

The League of Women Voters and ALASEM offered radon testing kits to those who requested them.

Some 260 residents in the Pointes and Harper Woods had their homes tested through the program, and for most of them, the test showed they had nothing to worry about.

Most of the homes tested had radon readings of below 2.0 picocuries per liter (pCi/l). The EPA says 4.0 pCi/l is the level when homeowners should take action to reduce levels.

Of those homes tested, 19 had pCi/l. levels above 4.0 pCi/l, with five of those homes above 10.0 pCi/l.

Grosse Pointe City had the highest percentage of homes tested above the 4.0 pCi/l level, but with only 23 homes tested, Alex Johnson, executive assistant for ALASEM, said it could not be considered representative.

Harner Woods had no homes tested above 3.9 pCi/l, but with only 26 homes tested, that should not be considered representative either.

Seventy-five of the 97 homes tested in Grosse Pointe Woods were less than the 2.0 pCi/l mark and six tested above 4.0

above 4.0 pCi/l. In Grosse Pointe Park, 22 of the 31 homes tested were below 2.0 pCi/I and three came in above 4.0 pCi/l.

"What this shows is that radon is scattered throughout the Pointes, with no real pattern," Johnson said. "But we are suggesting everyone test their homes. Even in cities we expect to find a radon problem, you find next door neighbors with ratings that were very different."

Radon gas comes from the breakdown of uranium and is found naturally. It is usually found in high concentrations in soils and rocks containing uranium, granite, shale and phosphate, but is also found in soil contaminated with certain types of industrial wastes.

Radon collects in homes. usually seeping up through the soil and rock into basements through cracks in concrete floors and walls, floor drains, sumps, joints and cracks and pores in hollow-block walls.

To reduce risks of radon, keep air flowing through the house with vents or fans and open windows; spend less time in closedin, low-lying areas, such as basements; permanent modifications such as caulking or waterproofing your basement can also be done to reduce higher levels of

Ann Nicholson of the League of Women Voters worked on the report, and she said she was surprized at the number of homes that had high levels of radon and how scattered those homes

"I don't think we're going to say this is a scientific study or that it's representative of the Pointes," Nicholson said. "What I do think is that it's a good incentive to get people to test their homes. Chances are they won't have a radon problem, but they should be sure.

Radon test kits are available at many local hardware or drug stores for a nominal fee.

Another member, Leroy Wulfmeier III, said while he is pleased at the denial decision, it is disconcerting that the four members of the Farms City Council who approved the facility's right to seek a state license were unable to see the residents' position.

"Our position was sound and within the law," Wulfmeier said. "The obvious protest by the residents and neighbors of the War Memorial helped very much. Everyone who supported our position is now vindicated.

"Our position is not a reflection on how we feel about the fine institution and all it has done for the community," Wulfmeier added.

The Property Owners Association claims that more than 1,500 letters of opposition were sent to the LCC. Supporters of a liquor license at the facility say the high number is an exaggeration.

"I would hope that the result would be final and that no appeal would be filed," Marco said. In view of significant opposition by the residents, it's hard to figure out why the council persisted on the issue.'

Farms Mayor Joseph Fromm, a supporter of the War Memorial's efforts, said the council's support was based on allowing the facility greater control over the distribution of liquor. Other council members supported Fromm's reasoning in supporting the request.

Weber said of the 4,500 events per year at the War Memorial, only 230 involve serving alcohol.

"We will go on with or without a liquor license," he said.

Gamber talked about the two cowbirds who would sit on the fence every morning and wait for breakfast when the family lived in West Bloomfield. One morning, there was only one cowbird waiting, Gamber said.

"He was squawking and very frustrated. I couldn't understand and I followed it to a big barrel filled with rain water. The other bird had fallen in and he led me

Gamber pulled it out in time. She said that parents have an opportunity to expose their children to the wonders of nature when they care for helpless creatures. "It's a wonderful experience for children to see this."

A good diet for baby birds is a mixture of raw hamburger, cooked egg yolk and small pieces of bread crumbs. Put some on the end of an eye dropper and dip it in water, Gamber said.

Another healthy meal is to soak dry dog food or cat food in water until it's moist. "It has all the vitamins," she added.

Besides wallpapering, painting and nurturing birds, Gamber does creative painting, such as stenciling, wall flourishes, trompe l'oeil and faux painting.

She has taken birds with her on the job. When she was wallpapering a bathroom for a customer recently, she took the blue jay with her. She closed the bathroom door and the bird perched on her shoulder while she worked.

And it probably didn't utter a critical peep either.

Fourth Friday count shows slight increase

By Ronald J. Bernas

The traditional fourth Friday count of students in the Grosse Pointe Public Schools shows an increase of 81 students from the number at the close of school in Because Grosse Pointe is an out-of-formula district, the count means virtually nothing in terms of state funding. In-formula districts use the census taken on the fourth Friday after school starts to obtain state aid a dollar figure per student.

The elementary schools have 3,358 students, the middle schools have 1,512 students and the high schools have 2,402 students for a total of 7,272.

At the close of school in June there were 3,212 elementary school students, 1,520 middle school students and 2,459 high school students for a total of 7.191.

Detroit resident caught smoking crack in store

A 39-year-old self-employed Detroit man was arrested last week after he was caught smoking suspected crack cocaine in the bathroom at Sears.

An employee at the store at

Mack and Moross noticed a man acting strangely and looking around frequently. The employee followed the man into the bathroom and found him smoking what appeared to be crack cocaine from a small glass pipe and using a miniature butane torch to light the substance.

When Farms officers arrived, the Sears employee had already searched the Farms man. On a table, police found the pipe and torch and a small, clear plastic box containing small white rocks of suspected cocaine.

Superintendent John Whritner said the numbers are recorded to plan for future staffing needs. "The numbers confirm what the pattern has been," Whritner said. "Elementary enrollment has increased, middle school enrollment has just about plateaued and high school enrollment has dropped off slightly, but we believe it is the last year for the dropoff at the high school level.

During a major reorganization effort in 1983, a citizens advisory steering committee predicted the enrollment in the schools would bottom out at 6,200 students during the 1986-87 school year, but Whritner said the enrollment never dipped below 7,100 students.

Class sizes, traditionally a cause for concern among parents and teachers, are nearly all down to size after a few class sizes at the elementary level were reduced. There are some physical education classes at the secondary level, however, which have more than 40 students. The school board promised at its Oct.

9 meeting to look into that mat-

"There are some problems at other levels," Whritner said, citing elementary classes with 25, 26 and 28 students, "but class sizes for the most part are pretty good."

Environmental issues facing Woods voters nvironmental issues have begun to plague the Woods and promise to play an important role in the city election Nov. 7.

Mayor George S. Freeman is running unopposed for the fourth time after 10 years in office and another 10 on the city council. But the three council members up for re-election are being challenged by James A. Alogdelis, who is seeking elective office for the first time.

A major environmental problem is the pollution of Lake St. Clair caused by the frequent overflow of the Milk River that sends sewage out into the lake after heavy rains. Officials report that this overflow has occurred 46 times a year on the average in recent years, even though pollution warnings have been issued only in the past

But neither Alogdelis nor any of the three council incumbents, Thomas J. Fahrner, Jean B. Rice and William W. Wilson, nor, for that matter, Mayor Freeman has a specific solution to the problem.

The mayor says flatly there is no current solution, predicts that Wayne and Macomb counties and their Milk River Inter-County Drainage Board will have to make the decisions, but admits that the costs will be high for the Woods, St. Clair Shores and Harper Woods.

As a councilman, Alogdelis says he would try to get the local people to pressure the drain board, County Executive Edward McNamara and even Gov. James Blanchard to recognize the danger of the pollution problem and do something about Fahrner agrees that "we've got to stop the sewage flowing into the lake." Wilson says the Woods is not interested in a proposed $72 million project to store more of the drainage water created by heavy rains and admits to some frustration over the local government's lack of power to act in the matter. And Ms. Rice admits that the inter-county drainage board and the state through the Department of Natural Resources will make the decision and "we'll probably have to pay for it."

An equally frustrating environmental problem for the Woods and all the Pointes is the future of the Grosse Pointes-Clinton Refuse Disposal Authority and its incinerator, which has been closed since Dec. 28 last year after state tests showed excessive levels of lead and cadmium in the facility's

As a consequence, refuse that once was burned now is being hauled to the Pine Tree Acres landfill in Lenox Township where the ash formerly was buried. But disposal costs are predicted to rise from $3 per ton to about $60 per ton.

This issue is frustrating to Woods officials because the agency hadn't communicated too well with the Pointe governments. Ms. Rice thinks, for example, that the agency should hire a consultant to find out what it and the communities it serves should do. She says the agency should help the Pointes recycle more waste but admits that will work only with the start of regular curb pickup of waste to be recycled.

Mayor Freeman believes there is hope in getting manufacturers to help solve the packaging problems that create recycling difficulties. Wilson thinks the problem is financing. He adds, as the Woods' representative on the refuse authority, that while more recycling is needed, Clinton Township does very little of it.

Other issues in the Woods include the need for more parking, perhaps through use of off-street lots, as well as possible threats to residential neighborhoods through efforts to approve licensing of private day care centers and setting up a drug counseling center at the Children's

On the question of whether day care centers should be operated out of private homes, all the candidates are sympathetic to the need but believe that the wishes of the neighborhoods should be respected and that such centers belong in areas zoned for small business.

The majority also support the council's rejection of the proposed aftercare drug counseling center but Wilson still believes it is needed in the Pointes. Other candidates expressed support for some such program but would put it in the business dis-

As can be seen from this brief review, the candidates do not differ much on the issues. Challenger Alogdelis, as a former teacher and school administrator, says that he would research the issues and believes that he, as a new person on the council, could contribute to action on such issues as the Milk River sewage overflow.

Yet we are convinced that the three council incumbents are struggling with their community's problems to the best of their abilities and that their experience recommends all of them for re-election.

Fahrner has 12 years of service and is seeking a fourth term. Ms. Rice has put in eight years and seeks a third term. And Wilson has served six years in two separate terms.

Unless incumbents act counter to community interests or otherwise fail to serve their constituents, we believe they usually deserve re-election. Without disparaging the challenger's qualifications, that conclusion justifies re-election of this incumbent trio which can claim 26 years of service on the council.

The state of the s

A small pro-choice victory

he 216-206 vote by which the U.S. House of Representatives eased restrictions on federal financing of abortions for poor women reflects the sharp division in the country as well as in Michigan and the Pointes over the abortion issue.

Michigan's congressional delegation split • evenly, but not along party lines. Nine state congressmen voted to revise the restrictions to permit funding for abortions for poor women whose pregnancies result from rape or incest and nine voted against the lifting of the limitations.

The two Democrats who represent the Pointes also split their votes. Rep. Dennis Hertel of Harper Woods, whose 14th District covers the Farms, Shores and Woods, voted against lifting the restrictions while Rep. George Crockett of Detroit, whose 13th District includes the Park and the City, voted for the revision.

In the Michigan delegation, seven Democrats and two Republicans voted to ease the restrictions while five Republicans and four Democrats voted against the proposal.

It is true, however, that even if the Senate passes the federal legislation and President Bush signs it, the new law would have no effect on the Michigan ban on use of state tax dollars for abortions except when the life of the mother is endangered.

That is why Gov. James Blanchard and pro-choice legislators are backing state revisions which would provide state funding of abortions for poor women whose pregnancies were caused by rape or incest as well as when the health of mothers is at

The governor explained again last week that he sought the exemptions from the ban to reflect what he called "common sense, human decency and good public policy." Blanchard had vetoed state legislation to ban state spending for abortions on seven occasions before the anti-abortion supporters through a petition drive got the issue on the November 1988 ballot and won the support of nearly 60 percent of the

As a result of that action, the number of abortions in Michigan during the second quarter of 1989, from April 1 through June 30, dropped to 9,145 from 11,791 in the same quarter of last year, a 22.4 percent decline.

The House vote, however, offered new evidence that the U.S. Supreme Court decision last July which gave the states new latitude to restrict abortions has energized the pro-choice supporters who have influenced public opinion as well as Congress.

News services reported that 29 House members had switched their votes since last fall when the same issue was defeated in a House vote. The other evidence of the growth of pro-choice sentiment came from Florida where the Florida legislature in special session rejected proposals to strengthen the restrictions on abortion.

Pro-life forces in Michigan, however, said they are not dismayed and predicted defeat for any attempts to weaken the limitations imposed under last year's approval of the ban on abortions except when the life of the mother is in danger.

The history of the issue tells us, however, that the battle will be renewed not only in the Legislature for the rest of 1989 but also in the election campaigns next year. In view of the recent experience in Washington and Florida, the chances appear to be improving for easing Michigan's limitations on abortion in line with the U.S. House bill.

Supermarket

To the Editor:

I disagree with J. Dettloff's letter of Oct. 12. We do not have too many supermarkets in Grosse Pointe! If you cannot find what you need in the overcrowded, understocked Farmer Jack on Mack, then it is very important to drive out to St. Clair Shores or to fight the truck traffic behind Kroger at Moross.

I'm sure that Farmer Jack can work with the city to design a wall and shrubs around their property that would be satisfactory to the residents of Sunningdale. We need a modern, well-stocked supermarket in Grosse Pointe Woods!

A tip of our hat to news staff

he editorial page of the Grosse Pointe News wishes to tip its hat to the paper's news staff for winning a second important award for its series, Alcohol and Adolescents, which appeared during the 1988-89 school year.

The award, this time from the Michigan Press Association, honored the series that ran from October 1988 through May 1989 and consisted of either single or doublepage spreads entirely devoted to the alcohol problems of adolescents.

The judges described the series as "excellent journalism and community service, and added:"Many lives will be touched with this caring and hard-hitting series (which) clearly indicates the paper's leadership qualities.

The earlier recognition came from the Suburban Newspapers of America which gave its top Community Service award to the series. The judges described it in these words:

"Without sensationalism or maudlin decrying, this extensive series of articles kept the issue of adolescent alcohol use relentlessly before readers for months. The series was highly responsible and balanced, not only describing the problem but also offering useful advice on how to help remedy it, including even recipes for nonalcoholic beverages to be served at holiday parties."

The series was conceived by Margie Reins Smith, feature editor, and was laid out, reported and written by Ms. Smith and seven other news staffers.

Winning these two top awards - one state and one national - provides well-deserved recognition for an able group of news people we are proud to call our prizewinning colleagues. Congratulations!

Flanigan: Newsman supreme

Every time I see an old movie featuring hard-bitten, fast talking newspaper reporters in fedoras and trenchcoats, I think "Ah, those were the days to be a newspaperman."

However, after reading about the career of Brian Flanigan, the veteran Detroit Free Press reporter who died Sunday, I realized that today, too, is a great time to be a newsman.

As it is with anything else, you get out of something what you put into it. And that goes for marriages, friendships and ca-

Flanigan began his reporting career with the Michigan Chronicle while living in the Cass Corridor. He was an ace reporter with the Freep and a Grosse Pointe resident when he died of a heart attack at the young age of 43.

But during those 15 some years as a reporter, he made an impact on Detroit.

Flanigan began with the Free Press 10 years ago as a police reporter, which gives him a plus in my book, and his career ended on the beat just hours after he finished pounding out his portion of what the paper called "the most compelling story of his life.'

Anyone who read the paper's special segment, "24 Hours: The Drug Menace," would have to agree that the special report was compelling and right to the heart of the crack cocaine men-

As a police beat reporter right here in the Pointes, I've known what a terrible threat crack poses on not just the drug users but on all of society.

The special section featured one crack addict who described how he goes "fiending," which is described as doing anything to get more money to buy drugs. This means selling personal possessions, not just of the addict's but also those of family and friends

1 Say

It's not just the drug that makes crack cocaine such a menace to society, it's also the extremes to which the crack addict will go through to get money for a "dime" of crack. The addict preys upon all of us.

Perhaps I'm defensive because I'm a reporter, but one Henry Ford Hospital doctor made the comment in the special report that he couldn't understand why the media is captivated by the drug problem, especially compared to all the other great > Admittedly, Henry Ford has a lofty reputation in all areas of health care, including cancer and cardiac care. But cancer patients don't lie, steal and sometimes kill for another $10. Thousands of heart attack victims don't hit the streets night and day "fiending" for more crack money.

The series "24 Hours: The Drug Menace" also pointed out the crack crisis' impact on children. Every day, court and social services offices are faced with abandoned, starving children of crack addicts — this is not to mention the addicted babies

A woman, who looked to be in her 30s, came before the judge.

The woman pleaded guilty to child neglect after her daughter, a toddler, spent three weeks in the hospital recovering from malnutrition.

Judge Kerwin asked the woman how this happened. He asked her what happened to the money and food stamps she was getting from Social Services. The woman mumbled something in reply, and the judge told her to speak up. She then said in an anguished voice, "I used it to buy crack."

Apparently the addiction to crack is so strong that this mother turned her back on her own child. Her own baby almost starved to death because the craving for the cocaine was even stronger than her love for her own daughter.

When I see or hear things like this, I get concerned. If a woman will allow her own child to starve so that she can get crack. it's no surprise then that crack addicts lie, cheat, steal and even kill to get more of the drug.

And this is just one incident I happened to hear about. I'm sure there are stories like this one going on every day throughout Detroit, the Grosse Pointes, the state and the country. Multiply this woman's tragedy a million times and you get some kind of an idea of the scope of the problem. A million crack addicts in this country? I'm probably underestimating.

The Free Press' special report showed what I always feared about the crack menace, and the paper and staffers involved deserve recognition for a job well done. The special crack cocaine report was also a wonderful tribute to Flanigan.

I never had the opportunity to meet Flanigan personally, though as a fellow newspaperman I followed his byline and admired his work. Professionals like Flanigan make journalism a worthy pursuit and make newspapers just as exciting today as they were in the good ol' days.

The Oh-

Choice needed

To the Editor:

Certainly we would like to see a new modern Farmer Jack supermarket on Mack near Lochmoor. In fact, any improvement at that rundown facility could only help. However, there must be a better way to implement Farmer Jack's plan than to impose commercial intrusion on a lovely residential neighborhood by wiping out homes on Sunningdale.
For instance, why not expand northward right on Mack by acquiring Red Lobster? Not too long ago that former bowling alley could have been purchased for very little. Where was the Farmer Jack planning department then?

Nothing is impossible and this suggested goal would be better for Farmer Jack and avoid encroachment on private homes as well as change the ambiance of the entire residential area.

Dear Farmer Jack, we like you where you are. It would help if, for openers, you simply cleaned up and perhaps modernized the present store. Bigger we don't need, but cleaner would be nice. Thank you.

No license

To the Editor:

It was with great relief and satisfaction that I learned of the Michigan Liquor Control Commission's denial of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial's application for a public Class C liquor license. The Detroit Free Press, on Sunday, Oct. 15, 1989 noted that the "Commission has closed another chapter in a 13-year-old controversy" by its denial. I certainly hope that this is the

As a member of the Grosse Pointe Property Owners Association, I appeared before the Grosse Pointe Farms Council on numerous occasions indicating to the council that not only was I opposed to the application but that the LCC would not accept any conditions, agreed to between the council and the War Memorial, attatched to the application.

The Detroit Free Press noted "the Commission rejected the request on a 3.0 vote because of the conditions the City of Grosse Pointe Farms placed on the War Memorial to seek the license.

Interestingly, our group submitted LCC rulings to the council which directly spoke to this issue but apparently councilmembers Kaess, Berendt and Rockwell did not accept this documented evidence in our argument. Mayor Fromm, who cast the tie-breaking vote (in spite of the obvious citizen opposition) in favor of the War Memorial's application also found our position untenable.

I certainly hope that the War Memorial will not seek an appeal of the LCC's ruling because to do so they will necessarily have to delete the conditions amongst which include that the War Memorial would not operate an open bar. If the Memorial appeals and deletes any of the conditions that council stated were part of its approval, I would ask that the council rescind its 'conditional" approval.

Lastly, I would like to thank all of those citizens who worked vigorously in our campaign against this public liquor license. I believe that it was the public hue and cry in opposition that played an integral part in the decision making process by the LCC Thank you for your support.

Smoking

To the Editor:

I am writing in regard to the issue of whether or not to allow smoking in public places. Smoking is detrimental to one's health, but more important, it poses a great health risk to others. Therefore, I believe smoking should be banned from all public places.

For a long time cigarettes were considered glamorous, but today their use is considered to be decadent. Not only do cigarette and cigar smoking look unattractive to adults, but it is a concern. because it seems attractive to our children. Everyone knows that this is a bad influence on the young people in our culture.

Hill parking

To the Editor:

The Hill Association, being comprised of most of the businesses at Kercheval on the Hill, would like to publicly express its gratitude and appreciation to Mr. Richard Solak, Grosse Pointe Farms city clerk, for his unending dedication evidenced during the past many months in improving our parking situation on the Hill.

Mr. Solak spent countless hours, many on his own time, to see that the parking improvements to the Hill have been accomplished as efficiently as possible. Mr. Solak has been of much help to the association as we have been dealing with the city officials and the residents to improve the Hill. He has been of invaluable assistance and we want the community to know how much we appreciate his help.

In addition, Robert Ferber and other members of the Public Safety Department have also been of great assistance, and we appreciate their cooperation as well.

Upon the final completion and beautification of the attended parking lot on the Hill, parking will be greatly improved and readily available to all those frequenting the Hill. We encourage everyone to come and visit with us.

Inheritance tax reform will save state money

The House Taxation Committee has begun deliberations on the Senate-passed Senate Bill 1 and my nearly identical legislation, House Bill 4025, to repeal the Inheritance Tax.

These bills seek to reform Michigan's inheritance tax system into what is called a "pick up" tax by which the state tax is measured by the maximum full credit allowed against the federal estate tax. For starters, this would exempt all estates of less than $600,000 from state tax. because they would be exempt federally. At least 25 states use this method.

These bills are in response to a growing trend of people moving their residencies to other states, like Florida, to avoid

I consider reform of the inheritance tax to be a capital investment. It will save the state money in the long-term, by helping to encourage our older residents to maintain residence in their home state of Michigan. It will help keep sorely needed capital in the state. Especially, it will help maintain jobs in the state, by removing the present encouragement to close or sell a business when residency is moved out of the state.

Currently, small and closely held businesses and family farms face the added burden, at the death of the owner, of paying Michigan inheritance tax while heirs struggle to carry on the

The reform we seek is not one which aids the very wealthy in any way. Estates larger than about $4 million are not affected by our present tax. What they pay is already given 100 percent credit against federal tax.

Some years ago I was able to get the legislature and governor to provide a 100 percent interspousal exemption. Now we need to address the question of tax treatment of the estate on the death of the widow or widower.

I am hopeful we may be able to obtain passage of Senate Bill 1. If we cannot get the repeal we seek, we may be able to get substantial changes benefiting Michigan residents. To create as much pressure on the governor as possible, for passage of Senate Bill 1, without amendment, I urge my constituents to write the governor, immediately, seeking his support of the bill. Write to the governor as follows: Gov. James J. Blanchard, State Capitol, Lansing, Mich. 48913.

Here are some tips to help you steer clear of winter skidding

Skids on icy roads can be easily corrected if drivers don't hit the breaks and remember a few simple steps, according to AAA Michigan.

Hard acceleration or braking, speed too fast for conditions, and quick, jerky movements of the steering wheel are the primary cause of skids.

The best way to avoid skidding is to reduce speed in advance of curves, turns or when changing lanes and make

But if you do experience a skid, don't panic, hit the brakes or jerk the steering wheel. Instead, use gentle steering movements to regain control.

For a rear-wheel skid, AAA Michigan recommends:

• De-clutch on a car with manual transmission. On a car with automatic transmission, take your foot off the gas pedal and shift to neutral (should be prac-

News Farms' Buehrig inducted into Auto Hall of Fame

Soichiro Honda, perhaps the greatest Japanese auto man ever, got most of the limelight in press coverage last week when he was among a small group inducted into the Automotive Hall of Fame at a ceremony at the Renaissance Center. But another towering figure, whose name never graced an automotive nameplate but who designed more timeless classics than any other man alive, was also in that select group.

Gordon Buehrig, 85, designer of the magnificent coffin-nose Cord, the dashing Auburn Speedster and a number of incredible Duesenbergs, designer of the legendary Stutz and, more modernly, of the '51 Ford Victoria hardtop coupe, could not be there for his night of honor.

His wife and daughter accepted the accolades for him, as he was confined to bed in his Grosse Pointe Farms home, recovering from some broken ribs suffered in a fall Labor Day weekend. Ironically, he fell while attending the big classic auction in Auburn, Ind., scene of his greatest creative achievements.

It is understandable that Honda would grab most of the headlines in the short-memoried media. Many of its representa- tives drive cars made by Honda. So does Buehrig, as a matter of fact. Buehrig has a '51 Ford Victoria and a more modern Corvette in his garage, but his favorite is a Honda CRX.

"The Honda is a great car," said Buehrig, "like a modern Model T.

Buehrig was such an admirer of the Honda that he designed a couple of special Hondas, one a sportster with a rumble seat (called the "Rumble"), the other a high-performance 150mph speedster (called the Competitor"). He submitted the designs to Honda Motor Car Co., which was not interested.

Buehrig was looking forward to meeting Mr. Honda, 83, a contemporary he has long admired. Honda had also expressed a desire to meet Buehrig, but it was not to be last week. So he did the next best thing: He sent Autos By Richard Wright drawings, specifications and a description of the cars by way of his wife to Mr. Honda. "What did Mr. Honda say?" Buehrig was asked.

"I don't know. He doesn't speak English and we don't speak Japanese," Buehrig said. "We gave him the material so he can have it translated and study it.

Buehrig was born in 1904 in Mason City, Ill., and began his automotive career in 1924 at Gotfredson Body Co. in Wayne Mich., which made bodies for the Wills St. Clair, Peerless and Jewett cars, among others. He was acting on the advice given him a year earlier by an oldtime auto designer: "If you want to be an automobile body designer, you should first learn how they are built and how they are engineered."

In 1927, he was hired by General Motors, the fourth designer hired for Harley Earl's new Art and Color Department, the industry's first styling operation. A year later, at age 24, he became chief body designer for Stutz, in Indianapolis, then the year after that became chief designer for the most legendary American nameplate of all, Duesenberg, also built in Indianapolis.

He designed such classics as the Beverly Berline, the Torpedo Phaeton, the Derham Tourster and the Weymann Boattail Speedster. He also designed the stylized eagle the company used as a hood ornament.

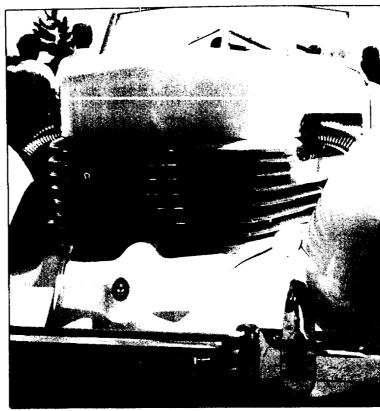

In 1934, he was transferred to Auburn, Ind., where he designed Auburns and Cords and produced his most celebrated designs, the '36 "coffin-nose" 810

Former incumbent challenges incumbent for Park judge

Assistant Editor

A former Grosse Pointe Park municipal judge for 10 years is challenging the first-term incumbent judge in what appears to be a tough choice for voters.

Incumbent Judge Kirsten Frank is in her second campaign for the Park bench. She is being challenged by Beverly Grobbel who served as Park municipal judge for nearly a decade.

Kirsten Frank

Frank, 33, is running in her second election after being elected to the bench following the resignation of then judge and current challenger Grobbel.

Frank is quick to point out that she was never appointed to the bench following Grobbel's resignation in 1987. While she was among several appointees recommended at the time, no appointment was made because of the politics involved, she said during an interview with the Grosse Pointe News last week.

Visiting judges presided during some 20 weeks between Grobbel's resignation in July 1987 and the November election.

According to figures supplied by Frank, in 1987 visiting judges sat in for the municipal judge on 34-1/2 court days. At least 20 visiting judge days in 1987 were used due to the vacancy and one was used by Frank during the Christmas holiday.

The number of days a visiting judge is required is important in that it shows how many days the municipal judge was absent. It cost the city $150 per day in 1987 for a visiting judge.

In 1986, visiting judges sat in on 24-1/2 days. During 1988, Frank's first full year as judge, visiting judges sat in on four days, and so far this year, 1-1/2 days have been filled by a visiting judge. After 1987, it cost $225 a day for a visiting judge.

Kirsten Frank

Frank said she inherited a heavy backlog of the cases on the docket when she was elected in November 1987. It took about year of heavy court work to get the docket up to date, which it is today, she said.

Since Frank became judge, computers have been added to the Park court, and staff appointments and costs have been reduced, she said. A partner with the law firm of Durant & Durant, Frank spends about 15 hours a week on her duties as municipal judge, which is a part-time position paying $12,000 a year.

The Park's main court day is Wednesday. Frank said she arrives at the municipal court at 8 a.m. and sits until all the cases have been cleared. Also, Frank sits on the fifth Wednesdays of months when they occur. She also opens the court for arraignments on Mondays and Fridays when necessary. Frank is being endorsed for reelection by Park Mayor Palmer Heenan. In 1987, Frank's opponents pointed out that Frank's employer, Richard Durant, was the husband of Mayor Heenan's sister. Frank, however, was elected as judge by the public in 1987, and she does not apologize for Heenan's support.

She pointed out that in 1987, her current opponent, Grobbel, also endorsed her for judge. Grobbel said it is true, she did endorse Frank.

As a lawyer she favors the district court system, Frank said, but as a Park resident, she understands the reluctance of the community to relinquish control of the court. The park would not only lose local control of the court but would also lose revenue if the Pointes went to a district court system.

Frank has been with Durant & Durant since she started as a law clerk in 1979. She became a partner in 1987. She got her undergraduate degree at Michigan State University in 1978 and earned her law degree from the University of Detroit in 1981.

Frank is president of the Michigan Association of Municipal Judges.

Along with her duties as judge and law firm partner, Frank found time to give birth in July to her second child, Michael Joseph. She and her husband, William Kelly, also have a daugh-

Beverly Grobbel

Grobbel, 61, went through some tough times in 1987. She said personal problems prevented her from putting the time in required as Park municipal judge and she was forced to resign in July 1987.

Beverly Grobbel

She was first elected as Park judge in 1978 and was re-elected four times before resigning in the middle of her fifth term.

Grobbel said her personal problems are behind her now and she can devote full time to the judgeship. Since her resignation, she has been doing family counseling, though not in the capacity as a lawyer.

She takes credit for bringing the Park court into the 20th century and for establishing the non-felony probation system now being utilized by all the courts in the five Grosse Pointes.

"I've had so much experience at it," she said. "I've really built that court."

Grobbel is a strong advocate of a district court for the Pointes, although she is quick to point out that she does not believe the individual communities are ready for the move.

"I always thought it was appropriate," she said of a district court replacing the five municipal courts. "I always thought it was the most appropriate for the community

"But I'm here to serve the people," she said, indicating that it's up to the voters and officials to decide what type of courts is best for their communities. "I don't see it (a district court) in the near future. I really don't."

Grobbel also believes the Wayne County Juvenile Court

Robin C. Buerki, M.D., recruited by the late Benson Ford in 1951 to head Henry Ford Hospital from among some of the nation's leading medical field figure, has been named to the Health Care Hall of Fame.

Buerki, 97, Grosse Pointe Farms, was inducted Sept. 13 in absentia at ceremonies in Philadelphia with four other health care industry pioneers in Modern Healthcare magazine's annual black tie event.

Ford, then president of the hospital's board of trustees, lured Buerki away from the University of Pennsylvania where he was vice president in charge of medical affairs.

Other positions Buerki had held at Penn were dean of the Graduate School of Medicine and Director of the university's hos-

By the time Ford offered him the post of executive director at Ford Hospital, Buerki was a prominent industry figure. He had been president of the American Hospital Assn. and chairman of its Council on Professional Practice.

After accepting the Ford post, he promptly launched the hospital into the international limelight as site of many prestigious medical symposiums.

He started the Henry Ford Hospital Medical Bulletin and the "Big Six" clinic group, which comprised some select hospital group practices such as Mayo in Rochester, Minn., and Oschner in New Orleans.

Buerki retired from Ford in 1964 at aire 71.

Others being inducted into the industry's Hall of Fame, on permanent display Pennsylvania Hospital, Philadelphia are:

John Mannix, founder of major Blue Cross plans; George Bugbee, whose post World War II efforts spurred new hospital construction: nursing educator Eleanor C. Lambertsen; and the late Foster McGaw, who donated more than $100 million to some 300 health care institutions.

Resident donates major Faulkner collection to U-M Library

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

As a way of encouraging people to read and buy books and to cast light on the role a library should play in society, Irwin T. and Shirley Holtzman recently donated a major collection of work by and about William Faulkner to the University of Michigan Library.

The collection consists of nearly 1,200 items, including many of Faulkner's books and manuscripts, criticism, articles and other Faulkneriana acquired by Holtzman since the early Holtzman's feelings for Faulkner and for books and literature run deep.

William Faulkner won the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1950. Prior to that, Holtzman says. Faulkner wasn't considered a major literary force, but Holtzman believes it is because his work wasn't understood.

"Most people enjoy reading comfortable things," Holtzman said. "To read Faulkner is not to read comfortable things.

Raccoon attacks, mauls whippet

There's a feisty racoon roaming around the Chalfonte/Moross area. Just ask Harold Jakes who paid $103 in veterinarian costs last week to get his dog stitched up after it had a close encounter with the wild animal.

Jakes let his 10-year-old whippet, Masquerade, out early in the morning last Thursday in the family's fenced-in yard. It was early enough that it was still dark, Jakes said, and when he went to let Masquerade back in, the dog was bleeding from being badly clawed.

"I'm positive it was a racoon." Jakes said, adding that his neighbor had reported chasing a very large racoon away the day before.

Masquerade, who might be hesitant about stepping out in her yard again, is recuperating after the attack

"There is a decreased regard for books and reading. It's not 'in' to be a friend of the library. It's 'in' to be friends of art. I understand this, but I believe it is at the peril of our young people.'

Holtzman is a Friend of the Grosse Pointe Library, and a member of the Michigan Center for the Book. Michigan Center for the Book, in association with the Detroit Public Library and the University of Michigan Library is hosting a showing of book collections throughout Octothese events as a way of bringing the libraries and collectors closer together.

He said he is pleased with the way the University of Michigan will handle the collection: It is being displayed together, just as it was displayed in Holtzman's home. Many times collections are separated according to topics, criticism goes to one room, books is relegated to another.

"The fact that it's not in my own home should not change the way I treat it," he said.

The U-M Library honored the acquisition with a day-long dedication, display and discussion of the collection on Sept. 29.

This photograph of the Conwy Castle in Wales is enhanced and strengthened by the effective use of the sweeping walkway and wall as lead-in lines.

Lead-in lines add power to photos

In past columns I've touched on the importance of composition, which I would define as the placement of the elements you view through the camera in a pleasing and harmonious way.

Today, I'd like to concentrate on a very important aspect of good composition, one that will enhance and add stopping power to your photographs: lead-in lines.

A lead-in line can be a river, pathway, road, fence or any other element in your composition that will lead and direct the viewer's attention to the central subject.

Next time you're about to photograph that weathered old barn, stop and take a moment to search for a composition that will include a lead-in line. Perhaps it's the dilapidated fence or the furrows in a recently plowed field that lead the way to the barn. By using either, can you imagine how much more exciting your finished picture will be? How about that lonely tree in the valley you're about to shoot? Can you position yourself so that the meandering river leads the way into the picture?

Using lead-in lines causes you to slow down, think more, and plan out the final image in your mind's eye. You're going through the process of making photographs, not taking snapshots and your pictures will definitely show the difference.

Subject placement often works class. the subject toward one of the corners of the viewfinder rather Photography than in the center. After you've your finished print is sharp and done this, look for a lead-in coming from the opposite corner.

In the photograph shown here of the Conwy Castle in Wales, I placed the main subject (the castle) in the upper right "third." I then used the sweeping lines of the walkway and wall as effective lead-ins to direct attention to the castle. See how easy and successful it works?

Of course, you'll have to pay close attention to depth-of-field. in focus.

Look for abstract lead-in lines, too. Man-made patterns such as the steel structure in a building under construction or nature's patterns such as the ripples in a dramatic sand dune can all serve as effective lead-ins.

The important thing is to begin to "see" lead-in lines. They'll help you look at the world in fresh, new, exciting ways. Your photographs will have added Most likely you'll need a small strength and impact that you'll aperture so that everything in be proud to share with others.

The four defendants were found guilty of assault with intent to commit rape and felonious assault and sentenced to three to 10 years in prison.

Following the conclusion of the case, Simowski was highly praised by Grosse Pointe Farms police Detective Earl Field, who said Simowski was the first prosecutor he's known to actually come out to the scene of the crime and learn for himself what happened.

Simowski said that to be an effective prosecutor, a person has to know as much about the case as possible before the trial. which means going to the scene, interviewing witnesses and going over evidence with detectives. On nights before going to court, Simowski pores over his

Known for thinking fast on his feet and his evangelist style in the courtroom, Simowski said he doesn't like to be bogged down by notes and reports. "I've never done closing arguments by notes," he said.

As a prosecutor in the special assignment division, Simowski gets the more complex, high-

Simowski's sometimes-provocative oratory has worked to his favor in the courtroom. There was the one case where a violent offender appeared on the witness stand acting meek and mild. Simowski's affrontiveness so angered the defendant that he jumped out of the witness stand

With more than 200 trials behind him, including 50 jury trials and 10 life sentences to his credit, Simowski has put a lot of "bad guys" behind bars, which is why he got into criminal law.

As a young man right out of law school, Simowski said he was just one of more than 100 prosecutors. He had a lot to

"It's overwhelming at first," he said. "There's so much at first to learn. You have to familiarize yourself with the criminal world.'

One lesson he learned about the criminal element is that "a lot of times there's no motive except for meanness.

For example, there was the case of one man shooting another for pouring out the end of a beer. There was another where a couple of men spotted another man wearing a lot of jewelry. They chased the man right into his house, shot him and then bragged about the look on the victim's face when he was about to die.

But while he sees the worst human nature has to offer, Simowski is able to keep the job in perspective.

You meet good people who believe in the system," he said. "It's when you're at the bottom that you come across somebody who is a lot braver than you

The brave people he's talking about are the victims of crimes who have the courage to testify. Simowski said the hardest thing about his job is getting witnesses to show up for court. And it is especially difficult and sensitive dealing with rape victims or the the family of a murder victim.

"You can't get emotionally involved in every case," Simowski

Also, the sheer number of cases handled by the prosecutor's office under the direction of Wayne County Prosecutor John O'Hair prevents prosecutors from getting too personally involved.

More than 15,000 cases go through the prosecutor's office a year, which figures to roughly 150 cases per prosecutor. O'-Hair's prosecutors average 30 trials apiece per year, which are far more trails per prosecutor than many other major metropolitan counties.

"The prosecutors probably do the best with the least than in any other county," Simowski said. "There's a lot of dedicated people. They don't make a lot of money. They like being able to make a difference, and we think we do make a difference.'

Voters in Woods to elect mayor, three to council

By Dan Jarvis Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Woods officials for City Council.

Incumbents on the council, Thomas J. Fahrner, Jean B. Rice and William W. Wilson, will be challenged by James A. Alogdelis, as all four run for three seats on the city's governing board.

George S. Freeman

Incumbent Mayor George S. Freeman has served on the city's top seat for the past 10 years. Before becoming mayor, Freeman served on the City Council, also for a decade.

George S. Freeman

Freeman said though the city has seen tremendous growth since 1970, the population has not changed. Most of the growth is evidenced along Mack Avenue, he said, and can be seen in the landscaped median, and improved storefronts along the busy thoroughfare.

Freeman, running unopposed in the election, wants to retain the seat because he enjoys serving the city and wants to com- tain their seats on the Woods plete various projects such as the proposed community center and Lack of parking along Mack Avenue is called one of the greatest problems in the Woods, Freeman said. Eventually the city may have to take homes behind stores on Mack to create additional parking space.

A ban on pit bulls, he said, is important to protect the residents. "When you vote for a ban, you are not voting against the pit bull itself, but for the protection of the residents.

Running for his first public office as a Woods councilman, James A. He also served as a school principal in Ferndale.

Day care in residential neighborhoods, according to Alogdelis, can be helpful to young parents, but operations can present problems for neighbors living nearby.

Lack of parking along Mack Avenue could be solved by demolishing homes behind stores to install parking lots. The problem is, he said, how to decide which homes to demolish.

A ban on pit bulls in the Woods may be unconstitutional, he said. Alogedlis prefers tight controls on all breeds of dogs to protect residents.

Thomas J. Fahrner

Incumbent Councilman Thomas J. Fahrner is seeking his fourth four-year term, having completed 12 years on the city's governing body.

Thomas J. Fahrner

Before he was elected to the council, Fahrner served on the Woods Planning Commission. He is now a member of the Wayne County Community Development Block Grant Commission and chairs the Judicial Liaison Committee for the Woods.

The Milk River pollution problem, said Fahrner, could be minimized by stopping pollution from neighboring communities from entering the system. He said the eventual long-term solution will hit taxpayers hard and the actual solution will be determined by the agencies studying the problem, he said, not by the city.

Fahrner is opposed to day care facilities in a residential neighborhood because of the impact on residents.

"The citizens feel they are paying taxes for a residential neighborhood and are next door to a business," Fahrner said. "I agree with the current ordinance prohibiting the facilities in residential areas.

As a member of the commission which has studied the parking problems along Mack Avenue, Fahrner said the city has tried to purchase property behind stores along Mack, but that deed restrictions on property have kept the property from becoming parking areas.

Fahrner supports the city's ban on pit bulls. 'I'm a dog owner and I may feel sorry for the dog owner, but I had to vote for the ban to protect the resi-

Rice said a solution to the Milk River pollution problem will not be decided by the Woods council, but by state and county officials.

"Our experience in dealing with various entities is that they say Grosse Pointe Woods is a wealthy community and that we

William W. Wilson

Incumbent Councilman William W. Wilson is seeking his third term on the Woods governing body. He served on the council from 1979-83 and again from 1985-89, and wants to retain his council seat to complete much of the council's work.

Wilson favors a ban on pit bulls, even if proper safeguards such as a stockade fence and heavy chains are installed.

Changes are needed in the city's parking situation along Mack Avenue, Wilson said.

"It's time to check all the streets and the flow patterns and determine exactly what changes to make.'

Wilson added that buying homes behind stores to make additional parking space is an option that cannot be ignored.

'Look Who's Talking' is life viewed through a baby's eyes

Special Writer

There's something about a baby that's irresistable in the movies. A picture can be mediocre, filled with nondescript acting and generally lame material. But put a baby on the screen and watch the audience light up.

'My Sister in This House' at Bonstelle

"My Sister in This House," the second production of Wayne State University's Bonstelle Theatre season, opens at 8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 27, for a two weekend run. Performances are at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday through Nov. 5.

"My Sister In This House" is based on a violent crime that occurred in France in 1933. The bizarre nature of the incident inspired award-winning playwright Wendy Kesselman to write about it nearly 50 years later.

Sometimes referred to as the feminist version of Jean Genet's 'The Maids," "My Sister in This House" explores what can happen when one has no power over one's life. It centers around Christine and Lea, two young maids, sisters, who work in the pristine home of Madame Danzard and her daughter Isabelle. Every encounter between the maids and their employer causes a build-up of tension between them.

Playing Christine and Lea are seniors Missy Gibson and Tracy Linn Washburn. Gibson is from Birmingham, and Washburn is from East Detroit. Senior Robin Urban, from Dearborn, plays Madame Danzard and senior Tracy Aller, from West Bloomfield, plays Isabelle.

Directing "My Sister In This House" is Margaret Spear.

A special treat at Town Hall will be comments and recollections by members of the Old Guides, an informal association of men who were museum and village guides during the period 1933 to 1945.

Additionally, visitors will receive a complimentary memento of the 60th anniversary weekend, and in both the museum and village, film clips will be shown of the events and personalities that were part of the 1929 dedication of Greenfield Village.

The dedication was scheduled to coincide with "Light's Golden Jubilee," the 50th anniversary celebration of Edison's invention of electric lighting on Oct. 21, 1879. Because Ford so admired Edison and had transplanted and restored the Menlo Park facilities at Greenfield Village, the dedication of the outdoor museum served as the most appropriate opportunity to honor a half-century of electric lighting.

Apartheid examined in 'A Dry White Season'

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

It is one thing to stand apart and sympathize with a group of people who are being oppressed and brutalized. We feel helpless trying to deal with misery on such a large scale. Yet while they suffer as a group, each one suffers pain and tragedy as a

In "A Dry White Season" we see what it means to be one of those who must live under rules that offer neither protection or justice, the price paid when authority is questioned or a voice raised in protest whether they black or white.

If they are black they are beaten, tortured and murdered. If they are white sympathizers, they are ostracized, stripped of their livelihood and when they get too close to exposing the truth, murdered. Shot principally in Zimbahwe, the film tells a tale of two families, one black and one white. The film begins with two fathers interacting with their young

The story revolves around Ben DuToit (Donald Sutherland), a white African teacher in a select boy's school, where his son is a student, and Winston Ntshona, Sutherland's longtime gardener and his son. Both men are proud of their boys and hopeful for their future.

It is set in 1976 during the Soweto uprisings. Ntshona instructs his son to have nothing to do with the peaceful protest. Nevertheless he does join his classmates. Many are shot down. He is caught, caned and re-

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Lynn Chase gained international reknown for her paintings and sculptures of animals in their natural habitats. But it wasn't enough.

She felt a need to give something back to the creatures who brought her this fame, so she created the Chase Wildlife Foundation, an organization which provides grants for conservation projects around the world.

Chase was in Grosse Pointe recently to talk about the foundation, and her new, innovative line of artwork featuring wildlife in its natural habitat.

A self-taught painter and sculptor, Chase has sold her paintings throughout the world, and has had more than 20 onewoman exhibitions of her artwork, many times donating the proceeds to one conservation benefit or another.

Her drawings and sculptures are known for their strict attention to biological detail, and to the accuracy of the habitat in which the animal is displayed.

But she is perhaps best known for the colors of her work - vibrant reds, deep blues and vivid vellows.

"But I always felt one picture goes to one home," she said. "I felt I wasn't reaching enough people.

So she founded Chase Ltd., through which she markets a line of fine porcelain tableware she hopes will reach more people and if it doesn't get them interested in doing something about wildlife, it might at least get them talking about it.

In fact, one of the world's finest collections of 18th century Vincennes and Sevres porcelain is in her family, and she used it to educate herself.

"This man I work with in Japan speaks very little English, and I speak very little Japanese, but when I walked into his office, he had all these books on fine French porcelain, which I love as much as he does," she said. "We communicate beautifully. I guess art has its own language.'

Each piece in each setting is different from other pieces, Chase said, unlike many settings which shrink the dinner plate design for the salad plate.

Just as Chase's artwork is known for her attention to detail, so is her tabletop collection which she considers an extension of her art.

Chase also travels the world in search of the most vibrant and accurate colors, sometimes using more than 20 colors in one piece.

But what is more important to Chase is the educational aspect of the work. On the back of each piece is a legend telling what the animal on the front is, where it lives, and many times that the animal is an endangered species.

"I want people to know what they're getting," she said. "I want more people concerned about the world's ecology and if I can do it subliminally through this, then at least I'm reaching them.

A portion of the proceeds from sales of all the porcelain - and the linens and wallpaper and place mats and fabrics she is planning on expanding the line with - go to support the Chase Wildlife Foundation.

The foundation is a non-profit, tax-exempt organization which provides grants for specific conservation projects.

The first grant will help fund an important survey of the jaguar in an area of the Yucatan peninsula in Mexico known as El Peten. El Peten is the largest virgin tropical rainforest remaining in Central America.

The one-year study will cost approximately $27,000. The jaguar, being a key predator at the top of the food chain, is an excellent indicator of the health of the rainforest ecosystem. Its ter-

Rainforests around the world are being destroyed at the rate of 100 acres a minute, and no study of this type has ever been done in that area.

The logo of her foundation shows a leopard, a seashell and two feathers in a heart-shaped shield. The leopard symbolizes the power of the animal kingdom, the seashell represents all the oceans and beaches of this planet and the feathers symbolize the Earth's airborne creatures. The heart represents Chase's love for and dedication

"The more studies that are being done show how inter-related the earth, the sea and the air are," she said. "And finally, people are starting to realize that damage to one means damage to all three.

"When people buy the porcelain, they're giving a little bit back to nature, and that's the reason this has been such a success," Chase said. "People want to give back."

Chase's porcelain dinnerware is marketed only at high end specialty retail stores throughout the world. Locally it is available at Jacobson's.

Fine Arts Society What's so fine about it?

The Fine Arts Society of Detroit is about 230-strong — all people who enjoy the arts: painting, sculpture, music, drama and related arts.

"But we organized a trip to visit the salt mines under Detroit a few years ago," said Norma Gohle, president. "Just because we were curious.

"Our major function — our means of entertaining ourselves — is to put on four plays each year," she said. "We're strictly amateurs. We cast from our own membership, when possible."

Last year the members produced "The Tender Trap," "The Last of the Red Hot Lovers," "Murder Among Friends" and "The Fantasticks."

In addition, they put on a Christmas dinner dance and an annual meeting — both black-tie-dress-up formal affairs at local clubs. They also dabble in other aspects of the arts. Each year they organize several other special evenings, like attending the Grosse Pointe Symphony together, going en masse to special shows at the Detroit Institute of Arts, gathering at a member's home for a piano concert, or holding a picnic.

The society was begun 84 years ago in 1906, Gohle said. It was formed to bring people together who loved the arts — both professionals and amateurs — in a spirit of fraternity.

She said they've remained true to its founding purpose. The spirit of friendship, the social activities and the camaraderie are still an important part of what the Fine Arts Society is all about.

The 32 founding members found that by 1907-1908 they had to raise their membership limit from 250 to 350. They peaked out at 350 members and started keeping a waiting list.

Early activities included poetry readings, musicales, tried-and-true theatrical productions, original plays, even outdoor operas.

The group had no permanent home at first, and so it met at various places: the Wayne County Medical Association building, the Walker residence at Fort and Shelby streets, the Arts and Crafts Society and McCollester Hall.

But by 1926, the Fine Arts Society had found a home base. The Players Playhouse on Jefferson Avenue was completed the year before, and the society negotiated an agreement with the Players to use its theater.

The Players is a men-only group which puts on theatrical productions. Theater Arts is the women-only counterpart to the Players. The Fine Arts Society is co-ed.

"Many overlap memberships in these three groups," Gohle said.

This year's plays have already been chosen, and work is beginning on the first one, "It Happened at Harrods," to be performed Nov. 17.18

They'll present "The Kingfisher" in February, "Nuts" in March and "The Ginsberg Principle" in April.

Gohle described the procedure for guiding a theatrical production from concept to performance. "We function through committees with board members as liaisons," she said.

The script committee recommends plays, keeping in mind the group's limitations for casting, costuming, building sets and such. The board of directors must approve recommendations.

The director is selected by another committee.

About two months before a production, the director puts out a casting call to the membership. He holds tryouts and makes his choices.

Thrice-weekly rehearsals continue for several months at a variety of locations — members' homes, various schools and The Neighborhood Club.

As the date for the performance nears, rehearsals move to the Players playhouse and work gets frenzied as the set committee fall colors coming into their brilliant splendor on the trees, the zinnias and chrysanthemums brightening our gardens, it seems an odd time to think about spring. But this is, after all, the time to plant daffodils.

Some people go all out on daffodils. Last fall several thousand were planted along the Maple Lane in the gardens of the Edsel and Eleanor Ford House, and this spring they were a glorious sight to see. This fall, a project appropriately called petal power. has gone even further, and is making a good beginning on the monumental task of planting three million daffodils along Detroit's freeways.

Gov. James E. Blanchard planted the first bulb to open this project, which is being underwritten by ANR Pipeline Company and Consumer's Power Company. The Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce affiliate Project Pride, the Metropolitan Detroit Convention and Visitor's Bureau, the Michigan Department of Transportation, the Macomb, Oakland and Wayne County task forces on freeway cleanup, and many garden clubs in the Detroit area are all participating.

Chairman of Petal Power is Janice Cordes who says that in St. Louis, Mo., which has tried this flowery idea on its freeways. there has been an actual reduction in traffic accidents because of the way people slow down to admire the beautiful blooms, and that the psychological lift of the acres of daffodils after the long winter, is tremendous.

School of Government Inc. prepares for 50th anniversary

The School of Government Inc. began its 1989-90 season with a celebration luncheon on Sept. 24 at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church.

Attendees honored the group's founder, the late Clara H. Brucker, wife of Wilber M. Brucker, former governor of Michigan and former secretary of the Army under President Eisenhower.

The luncheon meeting kicked off the group's 50th anniversary celebration, which will take place next year. President Linda Zimmerman presided over the meeting, which included memories expressed by members and friends of the Brucker family and included a birthday cake in anticipation of next year's golden anniversary.

The School of Government Inc., one of Detroit's oldest women's clubs, was founded by Clara Brucker to present governmentoriented programs for its members, to keep them informed about current events and to stimulate discussion.

The second meeting of the School of Government's 1989-90 season will be Wednesday, Oct. 25, at Lochmoor Club. The program will be presented by Ralph J. LaGro of Mount Clemens General Hospital on the catastrophic health insurance program.

The group's current board includes Rosemary Elias, first vice president; Renee Brucker, second vice president; Helene Boustead, recording secretary; Wanda Sepanski corresponding secretary; Cecelia Mason, treasurer; and Ida Mae Massnick, program coordinator.

Christmas shoppers will be getting into the Christmas spirit early this year by shopping at the Bon Secours Assistance League's 10th annual Christmas Mart, set for Saturday, Oct. 28, and Sunday, Oct.

Bon Secours Hospital's Science Hall will be turned into a fantasyland for the event, which runs from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Saturday and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Sunday.

The Pastor's Corner Soviet visitor

By the Rev. Dr. V. Bruce Rigdon Grosse Pointe Memorial Church

The telephone this morning brought the happy news that Grosse Pointe Memorial Church and Jefferson Avenue Presbyterian Church will be hosts to a Baptist pastor from the Soviet Union for several days in November.

I was especially delighted to learn that our guest will be the Rev. Anatoly Sokolov, who, as director of press services for the All Union Council of Evangelical Christian Baptists in the Soviet Union, has often welcomed me to his congregation in Moscow.

Like many other Soviet church leaders who have visited the USA this year, Sokolov has asked to visit hospitals, nursing homes, prisons and schools to observe some of the ways that American churches reach out to serve the people in such institutions.

This intense interest in social service ministries of the American churches reflects the amazing changes which are now occurring in the Soviet Union with regard to churchstate relations. These changes are reflected in the fact that each day in the Soviet Union, three to five previously closed churches are being reopened.

Across the country, theological seminaries are being opened and immediately filled to capacity with eager students who are presenting themselves for service in the churches

Monasteries closed for decades, are also filling to capacity with people who wish to serve God through the monastic

But perhaps most remarkable is the new opportunity for Christians to offer themselves as volunteers for ministries of service in Soviet hospitals and prisons. Recently in Leningrad, the city council turned over one of its major hospitals to be administered by the Russian Orthodox Church. None of these things would have been possible only three or four years ago.

We should, it seems to me, celebrate these wonderful new opportunities for our Christian brothers and sisters in the Soviet Union to make their witness to Jesus Christ. We have much to teach and learn from each other.

I take considerable pride in the fact that, across the last 40 years of strained relations, our churches have reached out to one another to witness to the power and grace of God who reconciles nations and peoples and creates a new humanity in Jesus Christ.

Grunyons to sing at First English Church

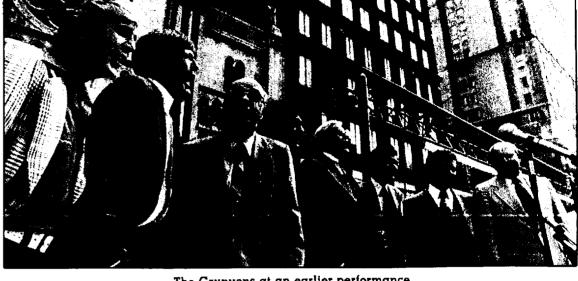

The Grunyons, Detroit's popular men's vocal jazz ensemble, will appear on Sunday evening, Oct. 22, 1989 at 7:30 p.m. at First English Lutheran Church in Grosse Pointe Woods. Tickets will be available at the door.

The Grunvons have been singing vocal jazz since 1949. The members possess an enthusiasm for life and music which go hand in hand with the sentiment of vocal jazz. The 17 singers include Doug Krieger of Port Huron, Joe Lawrence of Ypsilanti, Dick Bourez of Rochester, Gary Corbin of Grosse Pointe City, Ron Fredrick of Bloomfield Hills, Bill Gard of Grosse Pointe Farms, Wood Geist of Romeo, John Gilbert of Troy, Chuck Gleeson of Westland, Jim Leese of Birmingham, Sandy McMillan of Grosse Pointe Farms, Charlie Parcells of Grosse Pointe Farms, John Prost of Grosse Pointe Park, Roland Sharette of Detroit, Dave Sharette of Farmington, David Whitehead of Rochester Hills, and Bob Wollard of Grosse Pointe Farms.

It's a family affair for some: Roland Sharette is Dave's father and Gary Corbin is Bill Gard's son-in-law.

The Grunyons, who just celebrated their 40th anniversary by recording an album, first performed at a Junior League of Detroit function in Grosse Pointe in 1949. Now they are part of a non-profit organization called Michigan Vocal Jazz Society, which was formed in 1978 by them to encourage the development and appreciation of vocal jazz activities in our state.

This musical style has been part of the American musical scene since the early part of the century when the improvisations of black performers began to come to national attention. Vocal interpretations of the jazz instrumental groups of the 20's and 30's were popularized by singers like Billie Holliday and Ella Fitzgerald. As the 40's approached, vocal jazz groups emulating the brass and reed sections of the swing bands became a standard part of the music of the day, giving birth to groups such as the Modernaires, the Skylarks, and later, the Hi-Lo's, Arbors and the Four Freshmen.

In 1949, a group of Yale graduates who wanted to continue the singing "Glee" tradition of their university and The Whiffenpoofs, banded together to form The Grunyons. These original eight soon expanded to 16, drawing in men associated with other university musical experiences. The organization has continued for the past 40 years, offering its special brand of a cappella close harmony to audiences throughout southeastern Michigan.

The Grunyons begin their 41st year with two original members, representatives of 10 other schools, an age range of 30 years, several new vocal arrangements and a profound enthusiasm for life and music.

First English Lutheran Church is located at 800 Vernier in Grosse Pointe Woods and tickets for The Grunyons' Oct. 22 concert are $5; $3 for seniors and students.

begins constructing sets, the set dressers prepare the sets; the costume and prop committees finalize their work.

Wednesday is dress rehearsal. Thursday is a formal dress rehearsal for friends and family members. The final performances are given on Friday and Saturday. The Saturday performance is formal and members and their guests dress up in tuxes and formal gowns. A dinner is served after the performance. The productions are not open to the pub-

Gohle said there's typically a bittersweet let-down feeling after the final performance.

"I am energized by performing, by putting on a nice evening," she said. "Many of our members are lawyers - and most of them have a little ham in them. It gives them an opportunity to express themselves.

"And - we're among friends, so there's no strong criticism.'

Gohle has performed in several recent Fine Arts Society plays: Agatha Christie's "Ten Little Indians," the lead in "A Far Country," the lead (Katharine Hepburn's part) in "On Golden Pond." She was in last year's "The Last of the Red Hot Lovers," and she played the wife of Oliver Wendell Holmes in

"The Magnificent Yankee. Gohle said she is strictly an amateur thespian. She's a medical technologist, specializing in cytogenetics, or chromosome analysis. She's employed by Children's Hospital of Michigan.

"I've always been interested in acting, even though my vocation is science," she said.

Annual membership dues for The Fine Arts Society are $100, which includes admission to the group's four productions.

"It really is a bargain," said Gohle. "This is a social club, really; a social club that's interested in the arts.

"Members enjoy friendships. We're a very caring group. Everyone gets well enough acquainted that we care about each other, each other's families, and more.

Some well-known names are past honorary members of the society: names like Maestro Ossip Gabrilowitsch and Maestro Antal Dorati, former Detroit Symphony Orchestra conductors; composer Richard Strauss; violinist Fritz Kreisler; and actor Otis

Current honorary members include actress Julie Harris and concert pianist Mme. Ilse von Alpenheim.

Gohle said that although membership right now stands at more than 200 people, the Fine Arts Society's size has decreased in the last few years. They'd welcome some new people, particularly some energetic young members - anyone who is interested in the arts in general and theater arts in particular.

Tiger Stadium: local shrine holds memories for fans ter, for the worse, or just for the sake of doing something differ-

The last choice is the chancy one because most of the time we act blindly on a whim, without thinking of the consequences.

Change The connotation of the word is enough to bring on an anxiety attack, so dear is the familiar

The offer of a new job with better pay is basically a joyful prospect. It may also be tempered with regret at leaving behind familiar routines and familiar business associates.

On the other hand, what you may think is a change for the worse, might be for the better. An older person who moves into a senior citizen complex out of a home he has lived in most of his life, may not be happy about it. but he or she may settle in to enjoy the services provided. He may find relief in not having to maintain an older house.

Change for the sake of change works both ways. Taking a trip because "I need a change" may just be what is needed to relieve the monotony of a daily routine. If the tour chosen is exhausting - or the weather conditions inclement - the purpose is defeated.

If change raises misgivings from a personal standpoint, think how much more disturbing it is when changes are proposed that involve groups of people.

For some reason, resistance to change is often associated with older people, who are mistakenly seen to be set in their ways and opposed to change. This is stereotyping. The fear of change can be manifested in attitudes of people of all ages.

A case in point is one where three Oakland County cities blocked a $300 million shopping center that would have brought $4 million a year in taxes to the financially strapped Pontiac school district. Traffic congestion nesses were given as reason for the opposition. These were young communities.

Another case which involves people of all ages is whether or which makes tickets affordable.

ovated or replaced by a new. modern structure

For those who have lived in or around Detroit for many years, the old stadium is a repository of memories. Baseball greats have played within its walls since 1896. The great Ty Cobb played there. Lou Gehrig's streak of 2.130 consecutive games ended there. Reggie Jackson hit his legendary home run in the 1971 All Star game. Mickey Cochrane, Harry Heileman, Charley Gehringer, the brief but exciting career of Schoolboy Rowe - all are remembered for the excitement they generated, not to mention the thrill of winning the World Series.

What has been called a vast dinosaur is, for fans, a local

To see it demolished would be like watching the memories of those greats crumble into dust along with the walls.

Ask any fan and he or she will tell you that part of the enjoyment of watching baseball is being outside, smelling the newly-moved grass, following the ball as it soars into the sky. Bob Feller, the Hall of Fame fastballer who pitched for the Indians from 1936 through 1956 said, "I like the old parks; they're like people - some tall, some short, fat, thin. The new parks are sterile. You could wake up in the middle of one and you wouldn't know if you were in Los Angeles or New York.

From an unemotional and and loss of revenue to local busi- practical standpoint, a baseball game is the most economical sporting event that fans can attend in Detroit. Nearly half of the seats are in the bleachers, not Tiger Stadium should be ren- Ironically, this availability of cited for replacing the present stadium with a new one. The argument is that with the current stadium, the club can't generate revenue to field a consistently capable team. Baseball's new economics has made old ballparks obsolete because they generally provide more seats for vesterday's bleacher fans than for today's corporate patrons.

With player payrolls soaring, team owners need facilities with revenue from skyboxes and premium-priced box seats.

Recently 27 baseball fans went on a Smithsonian Institutionsponsored tour of historic ballparks, a sentimental journey back in time when a strike was a pitched ball not a labor dispute; and the game was played on fields of grass not plastic. Chicago's Wrigley Field and Comiskey Park, Cleveland's Municipal Stadium and Tiger Stadium comprised the itinerary. Of the four visited, Tiger Stadium generated the most reverence. One tour member remarked, "lt's like walking into the Sistine Chap-

Bridge

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD THE PASTEBOARD PASTIME

There ought to be a law! A law against "The Hamman Sham." I don't mean to be disrespectful of one of our finest world class players, but most of us at these lower level events don't expect to be manipulated by one who somehow acquired this obnoxiously offensive little defensive device of Roberts. In the hands of an inexperienced player "The Hamman Sham" becomes a deadly embarrassing weapon that causes severe declarer discomfort and incurably perplexing

A few Saturdays back I teamed up with the lovely Anita Pensler for twenty four boards of enjoyment. Our game was progressing pleasurably, give or take a go wrong or so, when we sat down to play boards No. 13, 14 and 15 at table six. Sitting North and South were two of the, seemingly sweetest little old ladies to ever participate in a duplicate bridge duel. They certainly didn't impress me as "The Arsenic and Old Lace" behavior type of Broadway fame. Dear Mrs. Prim (South), as I subsequently named her in my nightmarish sufferings, was deceptively pleasant, offering saccharine adulation as we successfully scored on the first two boards. Then

After North's Heart deuce lit on the table in a dainty, but hesitant descent, I counted winners and losers, I was obviously off two Clubs against any reasonable defense and therefore had to hold my trump losses to one. This could be awkward missing five to the Ace, Jack, Nine. What was their position I contemplated before playing to the first trick. Best I investigate Clubs before making the crucial commitment. I therefore won the King in dummy and played a small Club. South ducked smoothly and I inserted the nine which lost to North's Jack. Surely that would elicit a trump lead to diminish dummy's roughing power...Not on your life!...To my consternation, the Heart six appeared at trick three which I won in my hand with the Ace. So far I'd learned little other than the fact that my opponents played their cards in tempo. Was South's overcall, Hearts and the two black Aces, I wondered? Certainly not the Ace. King of Clubs or one of them would have appeared at trick two and yet South gave up the bidding battle timidly. At trick four I led to Dummy's Spade King and South ducked smoothly. For sure North had the doubleton Ace or I could be down. So I played a small Spade to my ten after South followed with the nine and North's Jack won and back came a Club! Now I've been set before, but "The Hamman Sham," this far from Texas was more than my disposition could tolerate and Mrs.

Prim so noted. When the score was unfolded and we took one of the few minuses she said, "Oh Dear! Did I do something wrong? I only made an overcall." I assured her that only the experts, one in particular, could have defended as well.

The point is if South had man are toward Vice with her The point is if South had won my trump King with her Ace at trick four, I might still have gone wrong, but when she didn't, there was no way on earth I could guess right. Only the world's great like Robert Hamman, defend like that. Not a lovely little old lady like Mrs. Prim, the newly duped Hamman Panther...There ought to be a law!

At the end of the 1988 season, the South football team began setting its sights on the 1989 Eastern Michigan League

The focus began immediately following a 27-6 loss to North on the season's final game. South finished 6-3 that year and 6-1 in the league, and the one blemish in the league against Port Huron Northern cost the Devils the champion-

All that focus, energy and effort finally ended when South beat East Detroit, 38-14, at Homecoming last week. This week, South prepares for Woodhaven, but in its spare time it can polish the E.M.L. hard-

In its 16-year affiliation with the E.M.L., South has earned nine football championships, two in the last three years. Also, since Jon Rice took over in 1987 the Devils have lost only one league game and won

These feats can never be eclipsed because at the end of the school year the E.M.L. will be absorbed by the Macomb Area Conference.

After learning that the MAC would welcome the entire E.M.L. for the 1990-91 school year, South began campaigning for the football championship "One More Time." South has dominated the league for 15 years, so it was only fitting that in this 16th season it goes out with a bang.

Rice passed out T-shirts with the slogan "One More Time" a few days ahead of South's confrontation with Port Huron Northern. Outside of Rice's office, a sketched ladder is pinned to a bulletin board. On each individual rung Rice printed the E.M.L. team the Devils would face that particular week; that's when the Devils began climbing up the E.M.L.'s final football ladder. By Rob Fulton Sports Editor Cheerleading's traditional task has been to lead the cheers. In the past decade, however, the role of high school cheerleaders has given way to a more liberal movement that requires cheerleaders to be athletes, as well.

Cheerleaders don't just have to be pretty and able to coordinate hand and foot movements. They aren't just asked to stand in front of a crowd, clap, jump and smile. They must choreograph, dance, cheer, tryout, compete, motivate, be self-confident and perform as a group, not individuals.

"Cheerleading, simply put, is group of people leading cheers," said South cheerleading coach Sue Dickinson. "Ten years ago cheerleading got away from tradition and it became more of cheer-showing with more performances. In that manner, there to a cheer other than clap their hands. Now, we've realized that we have to get back to basics and allow the crowd to participate. We do, however, maintain part of the cheer-showing.'

Misconceptions fill the minds of many individuals and cheerleaders are beginning to change the peoples' way of thinking. But most still think the "pretty" girls show up once a week and cheer, go home and come back in a week.

"That's very wrong," said North cheerleading coach Kelly Brady. "Cheerleaders go through all the physical and mental preparations as all teams do. Cheerleading can be as tiring and tedious as football, but it also can be as gratifying. Good looks won't get you the job anymore, it's your physical talent and athletic ability that really matters."

In every practice, the squads was no way fans could respond 50 push-ups, 40 jumping jacks to a cheer other than clap their and about 40 kicks and tumbles.

"Much like a team, wouldn't you say?" said Dickinson.

The Michigan High School Athletic Association still doesn't recognize cheerleading as a sport. Therefore, the squads are 'governmed" by the school and league bi-laws.

"No, the MHSAA doesn't recognize cheerleading as a sport," said MHSAA assistant director Sue Martin. "But if the 700 plus schools in the state were to vote it wouldn't surprise me if 50 percent of them would vote for cheerleading to be a governed

When Dickinson and Brady cheered at North, mounting, stunts and more acrobatics were allowed. Between 1985 and 1988, the girls were discouraged from mounting one on top of the other while performing. Now, however, the girls can mount two high and that is why more strong.

"Skill and physical fitness is a big part of cheerleading," said Martin. "If the youngsters aren't going through any body exercises and conditioning, then it won't work. Cheerleaders must be in great physical condition."

Just like a team. "Cheerleading has the same concept of any sport," contends North cheerleader Stephanie Li-girls need to be physically cata. "We have tryouts, we have to be in shape and we work on our cheers just like teams work on their plays. Plus it takes as much time and dedication as any sport.'

Cheerleaders are recognized as role models in their respective schools, and according to South's Chris Bone cheerleaders are beginning to be appreciated more.

See CHEER, page 2C

The South cheerleaders don't consider themselves just leaders of cheers because cheering requires great physical preparation; just like athletes.

"Role model is an overrated statement," she said. "Yes, they (students) know who we are, but I don't really think we're role models. I think it's taken a long time for cheerleaders to be respected for everything they do, and I believe we have a lot of respect - just like teams do.

Cheerleaders perform in front of crowds, both home and away. They don't get graded, nor do they actually compete - as teams do — on a weekly basis.

They attend camps and are evaluated on their head-to-head performance with other squads and according to Dickinson. cheerleaders only need one type of satisfaction.

"I know the crowd really enjoys the cheerleaders," she said. "and if they weren't there, people would wonder why. The cheerleaders really only need to know they are respected and appreciated by their peers. And, if they can walk off at the end of the day and hear one spectator say, 'You guys did a great job,' then that is their reward. They're graded on crowd response.

If the crowd doesn't respond, the cheerleaders know they didn't do their job. So, just like football teams, the girls evaluate their "game" performance.

"We go back on Mondays and work on things we may have done wrong," said North's Molly Fischer. "We also have to improve, even if we believe we had a great performance. That's the only way to get better."

Cheerleaders don't exactly evaluate game film, but they do organize "circles" in order to hash things out or prepare a week's agenda. Circles, or group encounters, play an integral part in the success of squads.

"After practice we sit down and talk about things," said Dickinson. "Closure of a practice is important because you can see where you started and what you accomplished, much like athletic coaches do. Circles are important because you don't need a wedge to come between the girls and this is one way to keep the family united."

'Circles are like a rap session," said Licata. "If there's a problem, we have to talk about it because if we don't get it straightened out, it can hurt our performance as a team.

The cheerleaders at North and South practice approximately 20-25 hours a week during football season, and more during basketball season. Their seasons begin in May and end in March with the conclusion of basketball. The season is long, grueling and tedious - and all of the cheerleaders admit that but they wouldn't cash it in.

"It's too much fun to stand there and be in control of a crowd," said South's Courtney Whitehead, "Sometimes it's difficult to smile when you're not in a good mood, but you have to muster a smile because everyone is looking for you to get them going.'

"I cheer because I love it," said Fischer. "I've been cheering since I was in seventh grade and I'd love to be a college cheerleader. Cheering has made me, and I'm sure a lot more people, well-rounded individuals.

Still, the misconceptions will run rampant and the cheerleaders will strive to raise the consciousness of many that cheering is a sport.

"Some people think it's a sport, others think it's an activity," said Licata. "Cheerleaders put in as much time, if not more, than football, basketball or even swim teams. Sure, we make posters and lead cheers, but we also lift weights and workout like teams. We're a support group stepped onto rung No. 1 and beat Port Huron Northern. Then rungs two through six fell and South reigned supreme in the league - again.

Cheerleading at North is becoming more respected, especially now that the squad's peers are recognizing them as a sport and not just a support group.

The latter portion of the schedule posted weak opposition, but games two and four against Northern and Port Huron, respectively, were decided by a total of two points. After those 13-12 and 21-20 wins, South was well on its way to stepping on each rung without a problem. In wins over L'Anse Creuse North (Game No. 3 in the league), Mount Clemens and Anchor Bay, South scored 107 points and gave up only 10, including shutouts over Mount Clemens and Anchor Bay.

Shutouts, team-oriented play and winning have been South's signature. The defense strives for a "goose egg" each game and the offense tries to put at least three scores on the board.

With that combination, it's no wonder South sits atop the league in 1989.

From the start, one close to the team would know that this was a different club. Only three defensive starters were back and the offensive backfield was stacked with seniors. More people than in the past attended camps, players worked with one another in the winter. spring and summer and most of the players came into camp in mid-season shape. Guys like Jason Bedsworth,

Jim West, Rapo Nazarko, Jim Campagna, Dave Asker, John Bednarchik, Kelly Graves, Mike Montagne, Frank Voelker, Dane Lupo, Andy Shaffer, Durmon Coates, Jason Weissert, Brian Letscher Paul Wortman, Rob Khoenle, Matt Wysocki, Marty Wayman and many more have successfully shut the door on E.M.L. football.

Focus and ladder climbing is done now, but the T-shirts can be worn proudly by a team so deserving to leave the E.M.L. with "one more" championship.

Devils close out E.M.L. with football championship

South quarterback Brian Letscher has guided the Blue Devils' offense to 110 points in the last three games. Letscher also ran for a score in South's 38-14 win over East Detroit, South's sixth momentum going into the straight.

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

The long-awaited celebration has finally arrived for the South football team.

Since January, the Blue Devils have set their sights on winning the final Eastern Michigan League football championship, and with a 38-14 win over East Detroit Oct. 14, South closed out a 16-year affiliation with one more championship.

"This is just great," said South quarterback Brian Letscher, who threw for two touchdowns and ran for another. 'Winning the league is all we've talked about since winter. We put a lot of pressure on ourselves to win it and every player on this team responded to it.'

The win marked South's sixth straight on the season, and also gave the Blue Devils their ninth football championship in 16 years.

"Coach Rice passed out Tshirts that had the words 'One More Time' on them," explained Letscher. "Because this was the final E.M.L. season, we wanted to win the title again. It's been our motto all along and now we can wear those shirts knowing we won the outright champion-

South finished one game ahead of Port Huron Northern, last year's league champ.

"If we would have shared the league, we'd be disappointed," said Letscher. "After losing it by one game last year, we just knew we didn't want to lose it again this year. We had a lot of juniors on last year's team coming back and nobody wanted to share it or lose it. It's just been a great team effort.'

South has lost only one league game in three years.

"That just means we've been consistent," said Z-back Jim West, who caught two touchdown passes. "This means that next year's team will have the tum from the start against the Shamrocks, scoring each time it touched the ball in the first half.

Senior place-kicker Jason Weissert nailed a 38-yard field goal to give South a 3-0 lead. and fullback Mike Montagne capped a 37-yard drive with a 3vard run. Montagne, who rushed for 51 yards on 10 carries, added the 2-point conversion, giving South an 11-0 lead after one quarter. Senior tailback Matt Wysocki had 42 yards rushing.

Defensively, South held East Detroit to only 11 yards in the opening quarter and 155 on the day. Kelly Graves led South with seven tackles, and Marty Wayman and Brion Czaiczynski combined for 12 tackles. Defensive end Rapo Nazarko had one running back sack and a quarterback sack.

"We're getting a good team performance on defense," said South coach Jon Rice. "We've gotten better every ball game and when the defense can get our offense the ball, we feel confident we can score."

And score they have. In three games, South has outscored its opponent, 110-14.

"The consistency we've gotten out of everyone has led us to score points and maintain drives," said Rice.

In the second quarter, Letscher, who finished with 89 vards in the air and 60 on the ground, hooked up with West from 20 yards out to pad South's lead to 10-0, after Weissert's extra point. Weissert had three extra points.

On South's next possession, Letscher galloped 48 yards on an option to extend South's lead to 25-0, and after a muffed East Detroit punt, Letscher hit West on a 10-yard scoring strike to end the half 32-0. It was West's seventh touchdown of the season.

In the second half, South went to its second team offense, where junior quarterback Chris Gramling, who also intercepted two South had plenty of momen- passes on defense, lofted a 40yard pass to sophomore tight end Chris Harwick for South's final score.

East Detroit quarterback Mark Paquin scored on two runs from a yard out.

"What makes this championship so gratifying is that we worked extremely hard at it," said Rice. "It's fun to see the kids work hard and pull it off. Last January we started things by lifting weights and focusing on the season. All that concentration and effort on winning these six league games has paid off and now the kids can wear those shirts proudly."

South is at Woodhaven Oct. 20 at 7:30 p.m.

"The season's not over," said Nazarko. "If the E.M.L. championship is going to mean anything, then we have to win the next two games."

South, currently 6-1 overall, won the E.M.L. with a 6-0 mark. Soccer

On Friday the 13th, the Blue Devils picked up their 13th win of the season, a 2-1 victory over East Detroit.

Chad Schomaker gave South an early 1-0 lead, but with five minutes to play, the Shamrocks tied the score. However, Jamie Mertz took a pass from Schomaker and goalie Jim Pappas and converted for the game-winner with under a minute to play.

Earlier in the week, South beat Warren, 1-0.

In that win, Jason Dritsan had two goals and solo goals were registered by Matt Smucker, Mertz, Paul Wasinger and Schomaker. John Ostrowski and Tony DeLuca had assists for the 13-1 Devils.

Swimming

In a huge 130-39 win over Eisenhower, the medley relay team of Ann Llewellyn, Tina Higel, Kim Higel and Amy Verlinden took first place.

Abby Pattee also had a first in the 200 free, while the 200 individual medley was won by Peggy Francis. Susan Blean and Susan Llewellyn tied for first in the 50 free, and Ann Llewellyn took the 100 butterfly. Blean also captured first in the 100 free. Leah Goldstein (500 free), K. Higel (100 back), Kathy Schrage (100 breaststroke), and Ann Eckel, Jenny Huntington, S. Pattee and Verlinden (400 free relay) were South's other top finishers.

Cross country

South's girls' team moved to 5-0 in league competition and 7-1 overall with wins over East Detroit (15-50) and Port Huron (22-

South was led by Kim Apple's (21:16) second-place run. Erica Mondro (21:24), Claudine Du-Pont (21:26), Susannah Mc-Andrews (21:53), Jenny Williams (21.58) and Debbie Solterisch (22:06) followed.

Marty Kraft led the boys' team to a split against Port Huron and East Detroit. South shelled Port Huron, but suffered its first loss of the season to a powerful East Detroit team.

Kraft ran a 17:24, and was followed by Delaine Boon (17:32), Joshua Christian (18:13), Brandon Farmer, Danny Taylor and Chris Hart.

Dloski wins

Ryan Dloski, a sixth-grader at Parcells, recently won the Boys' 12-and-under championship of the Rochester Hills Clay Court Junior Tennis Open.

Dloski beat Ann Arbor's John Long, 6-3, 2-6, 6-1, to wrap up his quest for the championship during the three-day tournament.

Dloski is 11 years old.

CAT LOVERS!

Grosse Pointe Animal Clinic (on Kercheval) has a wonderful one year old Tabby striped neutered male kitty that had been hit by a car. We have nursed him back to health and now he needs a loving home. We also have three beautiful little kittens. For more information, please call us at 822-5707.

Northern Suburbs Animal Welfare League Volunteer at 773-0954 or 463-9708.

TABBY KITTEN

If you have a place in your heart and home for a delightful bundle of fun and love, please read on. We found this abandoned kitty in a field and have given him his first set of shots, including leukemia vaccination, and had him wormed, dipped, neutered, and front paws declawed. He is approximately 5 months old, a beautiful black and white Tabby shorthair, and he loves to play with people or other animals. We have fallen in love with him but can't keep him because we already have several pets. Please call 881-2909 if you are interested.

KITTEN for good home, all white, long hair, black tail, striking! Approximately 6 month old male. Free to good home only. 882-8488.

DALMATIAN

Please help us find a home quickly for this extraordinary dog. Through no fault of his own, the man who adopted him and was supposed to give him a good home has decided he no longer wants a dog and has given us one scant week (at the time you read this, it will be a matter of days)to find a home for him or he will take him to animal control. A neutered male, this delightful dog is AKC, housebroken, affectionate and well behaved. We can't understand why his adoptive owner is relinquishing him, but we definitely DON'T want him to go to a shelter where he will be frightened and possibly become ill. For more information on this "One in a Million" dog, please call 773-0954.
