McKenzie Makes History as Democrats Dominate in Peekskill

By Rick Pezullo

Peekskill Councilwoman and Deputy Mayor Vivian McKenzie made history on Election Day being elected as the first Black female mayor in the city.

McKenzie, who has served on the Common Council for eight years, bested Republican challenger Emiliano Perez, 2,374 (60%) to 1,211 (40%). Conor Greene, who didn't actively campaign after losing the Democratic primary in June, picked up 144 votes on the Working Families line.

"We're a city moving forward. The voters made this happen," McKenzie said at The Bean Runner Café to a group of supporters, including current Mayor Andre Rainey, who served as the DJ for the festivities. Rainey opted not to seek a third term as mayor.

Perez, who operates a restaurant in Peekskill and owns several rental properties, said his candidacy was a symbol of hope for Hispanics.

"It has been a great honor to be chosen as a candidate for Mayor of Peekskill. As an immigrant to this great country one comes here with hope and for the opportunities that one has, my family and I came to Peekskill and as many of you have worked and continue to work many hours in our jobs and businesses, but, giving me the opportunity to serve the Peekskill residents to improve the conditions of the city and improve the lives of the community it was time to give my time to the city that has given me so much," Perez stated.

Meanwhile, Democrats also swept the three Common Council seats that were up for grabs. Incumbents Ramon Fernandez (2,101) and Dwight Douglas (2,078) were reelected, while Rob Scott (2,013) earned his first term.

"Thanks to God first, because He makes the impossible, possible. Thanks to my entire family, because so that I can serve the community, they accept that I sacrifice their time," Fernandez stated after his victory. "Thanks to donors, all the

Becker Leads Democratic Sweep in Cortlandt Election

By Rick Pezullo

Councilman and Deputy Supervisor Dr. Richard Becker was chosen by voters last week to succeed retiring Supervisory Linda Puglisi in January.

Becker, a cardiologist who has been on the Town Board since 2007, was at the top of the Democratic slate and won handily over Republican challenger Laure Abbate Ryan, 5,965 votes to 3,925.

"I am both thrilled and honored to have won election as the next Supervisor for the Town of Cortlandt," Becker said. "The results on November 2 confirmed that our campaign message was well-received and that voters trust us to achieve our stated goals. With 60% of the votes, many would say there is a mandate to pursue our agenda. As a physician who has served this community for over 30 years without any consideration of partisanship, I will strive to consider the needs and interests of all our residents, moving Cortlandt forward together. We will do our very best to deserve your faith and support."

Cortlandt and Croton Democrats celebrated their victories at Table 9.

"This is a critical time for Cortlandt and it's villages and hamlets: the closure of Indian Point and the resultant concern about job loss and revenue to our community, the retirement of Linda Puglisi, who has led our town through good times and bad, and the prolonged COVID pandemic, with

Esposito, Haughwout Prevail in Yorktown Town Board Race

By Rick Pezullo

The Yorktown Town Board will be dominated by one party after voters elected two Republican candidates on Election Day for two seats that were occupied by Democrats.

Chamber of Commerce President Sergio Esposito and his GOP running mate Luciana Haughwout were both elected for the first time, defeating three-term Councilman Vishnu Patel and former Supervisor and Town Justice Ilan Gilbert.

Esposito, a Senior Analyst at Comprehensive Computers, Inc., which he co-founded in 1998, was the leading vote getter with 5,502. Haughwout, a small business owner, finished second with 4,665.

"Thanks to all who believed and for all of your support. It was heartwarming and I want to SHOUT OUT the sincerest Thank You from my family to yours!" Esposito stated.

Patel, a retired IBM scientist who earned many awards during his 36-year career, including Inventor of the Year, came in third place with 4,307 votes.

"I am proud of what I was able to accomplish for the people of Yorktown during my three terms on the Town Board," Patel said. "Long before I was elected to public office, my passion was to serve the community that I love, and after my service on the Town Board, I will continue working just as hard for Yorktown. I believe that my purpose in life is to help others, and that doesn't change whether or not I hold elected office."

Gilbert, who served two years as supervisor before being unseated by current Supervisor Matt Slater in 2019, was fourth with 4,156 votes.

"Regarding my defeat in this last election, I was reminded by a cherished friend of a Kennedy family quote so relevant in the past yet so relevant today... 'For me, a few hours ago, this campaign came to an end. For all those whose cares have been our concern, the work goes on, the cause endures, the hope still lives, and the dream shall never die,'" Gilbert reflected.

Scorrano Elected New Somers Supervisor with Win over Keegan

By Rick Pezzullo

Republican Robert Scorrano was elected Somers supervisor on Election Day, defeating Democrat Stephanie Keegan, 3,668 to 2,412.

Scorrano will succeed Rick Morrissey, who announced in January he would not be seeking a fifth two-year term. The supervisor seat carries with it an annual salary of $109,233.

"It was an incredible night, thank you Somers. I am proud to be your next town supervisor. I look forward to serving our great town," Scorrano stated.

Scorrano served on the Zoning Board of Appeals from 2015 to 2018 and is heavily involved in Somers Youth Sports as a coach.

After graduating from Hofstra University, he set his sights on a fast-paced career in the energy trading industry, trading for such companies as Allegheny and NRG Energy. He then shifted his career to insurance and financial services where he is currently Vice President, Employee Benefits for one of the largest insurance brokers in the U.S. Prior to that he worked for New York Life Insurance Company and Prudential Financial where he managed a team of successful financial advisors which he recruited, trained, and developed.

Keegan, who lives in Heritage Hills, is a former educator who also worked in the medical field. One of her three sons, Daniel, served in Afghanistan for 26 months. When he returned home, he struggled to get the care he needed. After a long struggle with PTSD and addiction, he died in 2016. Keegan has been carrying forward his legacy ever since.

She's been to the State of the Union in Washington, D.C. as an honored guest, and spoken on panels with presidential candidates. She's traveled the nation to tell Daniel's story and deliver legislation that puts veterans first.

Last November, Keegan lost in her bid to unseat State Assemblyman Kevin Byrne.

"Well folks, after knocking nearly 1,300 doors, walking more than 200 miles for sidewalks, and doing my best to convince an historically Republican community that it might be time to look at Somers through a different lens the race has ended with a far different outcome than I had hoped for," Keegan stated. "There are countless reasons for this disappointing ending, but that conversation is for another day. For now, let me say thank you to everyone who supported me and the amazing team I ran with. I will forever hold all the support we have received during this year in my heart, and I will live to fight another day! This election is over, but the effort to help is not over by a long shot! Be well my friends."

Meanwhile, in the Town Board race for two available seats, GOP councilmen Anthony Cirieco (3,579) and William Faulkner (3,246) were reelected, beating Tom Newman (2,538) and Margaret DiLorenzo (2,436).

Two Streets in Ossining Named After Influential Residents

By Rick Pezzullo

Two streets in the Village of Ossining were named last week by the Board of Trustees in honor of residents whose lives took different paths but left a lasting legacy on the community.

The intersection of South Highland Avenue and Main Street, near the historic Ossining Bank Building, was honorarily named for Dream Ioni Shepherd, who died Aug. 21 at the age of 16 as she was preparing to enter her senior year at Ossining High School.

Shepherd valiantly fought Sickle Cell Disease from birth until she received a stem cell transplant at the age of 10. She endured harsh recovery processes for years after the transplant and later would battle cancer.

Her story led to the passage of Dream's Law in New York State, which ensures medically fragile people receive proper at-home professional medical care once they leave the hospital after transplant surgeries.

"Dream used her medical conditions and life circumstances to fight for better life quality for others is a testament to her spirit. These are gifts to not just the people of Ossining but the people of New York State that will keep on giving," Village Historian Joyce Sharrock-Cole wrote in a report to the Board of Trustees.

Meanwhile, the corner of Beach Road was honorarily named for Barbara Klapkowski, a 59-year resident of Ossining who died Feb. 6 at the age of 88.

Klapkowski was a frequent attendee of village Planning Board meetings before she embarked on a 30-year run on the Planning Board and Architectural Review Board. She only missed one meeting during that time. As chair for 10 years, it is estimated she oversaw more than 1,500 applications with "a meticulous eye for detail," according to Sharrock-Cole.

"She asked questions, challenged applications, visited sites, and furthered her education by taking courses that would increase her knowledge of the field," Sharrock-Cole wrote. "On Sunday mornings, she would have breakfast at the Highland Diner and engage in conversations with residents about their sentiments on the village. She would take the results of these conversations into account when doing her work for the village."

volunteers, the district leaders, the unions, organizations and community leaders who supported us, the Peekskill Democratic Party, especially thanks to those who crossed party lines (Republicans, Independents and without party affiliation) who had previously personally expressed their support to us. Thanks to our GOP opponents because we were able to compete a relatively fair campaign, almost until the end."

"Thank you, Peekskill! Thank you for wanting ONE PEEKSKILL, united, to keep Peekskill Moving Forward," he continued. "This is the second time that I have participated and that we won, a general election. You the majority have placed us in the top, the most voted of the seven candidates for the Common Council. valuing our work and our service to our city.

We humbly accept the challenge and above all the great commitment that this result means to me. We will all continue working as a team."

Leester Brown was fourth with 1,253 votes, followed by Bill Moran (1,214), Ken Gilleo (1,191), Councilwoman Vanessa Agudelo (420), Amy Perlow (266) and Amy Vele (224).

Agudelo was the lone member of the Progress 4 Peekskill team that continued actively campaigning after the slate lost in the Democratic primary. She was seeking a second four-year term.

its resultant isolation and discord over vaccination and masking, all have caused much angst and divisiveness," he continued. "Finally, with so many in our community experiencing financial challenges, it is important to make all residents feel that their concerns are being addressed."

Ryan, a retired teacher who served 12 years as a trustee on the Hendrick Hudson Board of Education, thanked her supporters.

"The results are not what I was hoping for but I am proud of my campaign and what I accomplished trying to get my message across to our community," she stated. "I am so proud of my running mates. We offered plans, visions and solutions. I will not stop advocating for the changes and improvements I campaigned upon. God Bless because we are going to need it."

In the Town Board race, Councilman James Creighton was reelected to a second term with 5,534 votes, while Zoning Board of Appeals member Cristin Jacoby was second with 5,412. Falling short were GOP candidates Tom Walsh (4,191) and Warren Smith (4,043).

Slater and Highway Superintendent Dave Paganelli were returned to their respective positions running unopposed, while Aviah Cohen Pierson was elected as town justice, also running unopposed.

"Earlier today I spoke with both Councilman Vishnu Patel and Lanny Gilbert. Both have served our community, and while we may not always agree on the issues, I thanked them for their dedication and commitment to Yorktown. Anyone who runs for public office deserves our gratitude," Slater stated.

A few days after the election, a video surfaced of racial slurs being directed at Patel from an unidentified person at the Yorktown

Republican Party victory celebration.

Patel said he has had to endure hateful remarks since he was first elected in 2009.

"It is not surprising that one individual at a Republican gathering should shout out a vile obscene remark about my nationality. Donald Trump's behavior as President gave permission for the worst elements in the Republican Party to say and do things openly that they would never have dared to in the past," Patel said.

"What hurts me deeply about that video is that leaders of the Yorktown Republicans seem to be cheering those unspeakable words with nobody speaking against them. I nonetheless remain hopeful that a new generation of Yorktown Republicans will appeal to the best instincts of people and not the worst," he added.

Latimer Easily Wins Second Term as Westchester County Executive

By Martin Wilbur

Westchester County Executive George Latimer easily won re-election to another four years in office Tuesday night, defeating Republican challenger Christine Sculti.

Latimer declared victory and spoke to supporters at The Opus Westchester hotel in White Plains, pledging to continue fighting to improve the quality of life for the county's residents while reaching for common ground among those who disagree.

"We here in Westchester County created a template and the template is results matter, that we don't accept that we can't build a New Rochelle Family Court, we don't accept the thought that the Miller House is going to collapse," Latimer said.

"We're going to succeed in department after department because we believe in things to make people's lives better," he added.

Latimer defeated Sculti 97,753-60,324, according to the Westchester County Board of Elections. Sculti, a Harrison resident, had served as former county executive Rob Astorino's chief adviser during his eight years in office.

At a briefing the following morning he called his victory "a significant vote of confidence." He pointed to the county's handling of the COVID-19 crisis and the county's 91 percent vaccination rate. Latimer said he expected the pandemic to still be an issue during the next four years.

In 2022, the county tax levy will decline for the third consecutive years. Whether that can be extended in the ensuing years will depend on whether fresh non-property tax revenues can be identified and on how will expense are held in check.

"It is to do the things we need to do, maintain services and not increase property taxes in the process of doing that," Latimer said.

Sculti, a Harrison resident, said she spoke with Latimer during the day on Wednesday to congratulate him on his victory and wished him success in his second term.

She said she was pleased to have given Westchester voters a real choice and that it is important for incumbents to be vigorously challenged.

"To the tens of thousands of voters who welcomed our message and placed their trust in me, I am humbled by your support," Sculti wrote on her campaign's Facebook page. "I heard your voices, and I will continue speaking out on your behalf. Going forward, the issues we campaigned on - the need for lower taxes, safer communities and checks and balances - will not be going away and it is our collective responsibility to continue to hold government accountable."

The victory for Latimer, 67, continues his streak of never having lost an election starting with his service on the Rye City Council in the 1980s. He has also served on the Board of Legislators and both houses of the state legislature before winning his first race for county executive in 2017.

In the county clerk's race, Democratic incumbent Timothy Itoni defeated Republican challenger Scooter Scott 90,560-55,704 to win a fourth term.

County Executive George Latimer was successful in his re-election bid against challenger Christine Sculti last week.

Incumbents Hold on to Win Local County Legislator Seats

By Abby Luby

Democrats will still hold a supermajority on the Westchester Board of Legislators for the next two years, although some of the races involving local county seats last week were closer than anticipated.

Democratic legislators Colin Smith (D-Peekskill) Vedat Gashi (D-Yorktown) and Catherine Borgia (D-Ossining) all won re-election while Katonah resident Erika Pierce, in her first run for public office, won the race for an open seat in District 2.

In the District 1 race, Smith was re-elected to a second term, edging former Peekskill Councilman Joe Torres, 5,965-5,651.

"I won re-election because the people saw I was focused on delivering results and making things better," Smith said. "Our county executive set the tone with his slogan this year – results, not rhetoric – but that was my guiding philosophy from the moment I took office."

While Torres has a mathematical chance to catch Smith, it is unlikely. According to the Board of Elections, 416 absentee ballots have been received, but about 60 percent are from registered Democrats.

"I've always sought to bring people together to deliver meaningful change, not score cheap political points, and that's exactly what I will continue to do over the next two years," Smith said.

Gashi in District 4, covering Yorktown, New Castle and a portion of Somers, was re-elected to a second term after defeating Republican challenger Robert Brower Jr., 8,179-7,038.

For most of the evening last Tuesday, the election was extremely tight before Gashi pulled ahead late.

"We had a great campaign even though it was a rough environment for Democrats, but the results are a testament to the great work the board did during my first term," he said.

Gashi added that he was humbled by the overwhelming support, but there is a lot of work to do.

"We will continue investing in the infrastructure and try into find way to keep Westchester affordable," he said.

Pierce will succeed Legislator Kitley Covill, who announced early this year that she would not seek a third term. Pierce defeated her Republican challenger, Gina Arena, 7,838-5,738. The district covers Mount Kisco, Bedford, Lewisboro, North Salem and part of Somers.

Pierce, who served as Covill's legislative aide, thanked her supporters for her success but was disappointed that voting reform measures on the ballot last week failed.

"As a group of Democrats and voters with similar sensibilities, we cannot walk away from yesterday without recognizing the urgency for the continued work ahead," she said.

Arena also thanked those who backed her. "We did not get the election results we wanted, but I appreciate the support and enthusiasm I received from so many people on Tuesday," Arena said.

Borgia easily won re-election over Republican Charles Braue, 6,864-3,375. This will be Borgia's sixth and final two-year term as a county legislator because she is term-limited.

Another incumbent, Margaret Cunzio (C-Mount Pleasant), was victorious in her bid for a fourth term representing District 3, which includes Mount Pleasant, North Castle and parts of Briarcliff Manor and Greenburgh. Cunzio defeated Pleasantville Village Trustee David Vinjamuri, 7,325-5,307.

"Thank you to the residents of District 3 for their overwhelming support," Cunzio said in a statement. "It has been a privilege to serve them over the last six years. I will continue to work in a nonpartisan manner to achieve meaningful results for our community and all of Westchester County."

Vinjamuri said he was happy to run despite falling short.

"My campaign was entirely positive and issue-based and I intend to keep fighting for the issues I believe in as Pleasantville village trustee," he said.

Vinjamuri said he called Cunzio to congratulate her.

"I believe she will continue to work hard for the county."

Democrats will hold a 15-2 majority on the Board of Legislators next year. The one seat snatched from them was by Republican James Nolan who defeated incumbent Ruth Walter in District 15, which includes portions of Yonkers and Bronxville. The final tally gave Nolan 5,477 votes to Walter's 4,715.

Ten of the Board of Legislators races were uncontested.

Winning New Castle Slate Calls on Board to Table Form Based Code

By Martin Wilbur

The hard-fought New Castle town election may be over but it remains to be seen what will become of the Form Based Code.

Last weekend, Supervisor-elect Lisa Katz called on the current board majority to suspend any anticipated action on the code for the remainder of the year given the outcome of last week's election.

Unite New Castle, the ticket that Katz led, swept the four Town Board seats that were contested as they campaigned vigorously against the Form Based Code. They contended it would allow developers to construct four-story buildings throughout downtown Chappaqua with well over 900 residential units that would crowd the Chappaqua School District.

But the first item on the board's Wednesday evening work session agenda is a discussion item on the proposed findings statement for the Form Based Code and its status. The board approved the Final Generic Environmental Impact Statement last month.

"I'm not sure what will happen, but I would hope my colleagues see what voters were saying and table that decision," Katz said.

The three remaining board members, Acting Supervisor Jeremy Saland and councilwomen Lori Morton and Lauren Levin, have supported the code but only Saland will remain on the board after the end of the year.

In a statement released late last week, the Unite New Castle slate, which also included Tara Kassal and Victoria Tipp urged Saland, Morton and Levin to refrain from taking any action on the Form Based in the remaining weeks of 2021.

They called the election a referendum on the Form Based Code.

"What has often been mischaracterized as the few voices of a loud minority is clearly much more than that, and the outcome of this race is an unambiguous, undeniable statement from our residents that they are looking for a different solution than the one that has been proposed," their statement read in part.

A fourth member of the ticket, Andrea Sanseverino Galan won a seat but has already announced via social media she will not serve because she is moving out of town. Her running mates have announced they intend to appoint Chris Hildenbrand to the vacant seat.

Reached last week, Morton gave little indication about what the board might do.

"I think that as a board we will be talking out our individual perspectives on the path forward and arriving at an action or a no-action that's in the best interests of the town as we see it," she said.

Messages left for Saland and Levin last weekend were not returned.

However, if the board were to move forward with adoption of the findings statement or any action to advance the Form Based Code, the new board in January "will use every legal means at its disposal to have this action reversed," Unite New Castle's statement read.

The winning slate also warned downtown property owners not to rely on any new zoning based that would be moved forward between now and the end of the year.

"We are hereby putting every party on notice that they should not have any reasonable expectation that they can rely upon any resolution passed relating to the proposed Findings Statement or Form-Based Code unless it is ratified or established by the newly elected board after it has been sworn in," they stated.

Parents Appeal to Un-Mask P'ville School District Students

By Abby Luby

Students wearing face coverings in schools has become a flash point at Board of Education across the United States.

Recently, two mothers made an emotional appeal to Pleasantville school officials to unmask the district's students, especially the youngest children.

Addressing the Board of Education during a recent public hearing on the district safety code was Mandy Yasinski and Ellen Norton, two of the 63 signees of an online petition titled "Parents in Pleasantville School District Support to Lift Mask Mandate in School."

Yasinski, a mother of four children attending high school and middle school, pressed for answers, especially since new COVID-19 cases among students in the district are negligible. Last week the district reported no positive cases.

"What are the parameters from the (Department of Health) to justify the use of emergency mask measures in schools? Is there a threshold that would trigger an end to the masking?" Yasinski asked.

Last August the state Health Department issued an emergency regulation requiring all students in public or private schools, along with faculty and staff, to wear masks inside school buildings. The mandate followed the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) guidelines.

Yasinski cited a large-scale study published by the CDC last year that covered more than 90,000 elementary school students in 169 schools in Georgia. The first of its kind, the study was inconclusive. It found no clear benefit for masking requirements for students without also studying mitigation measures such as improved ventilation systems and social distancing.

In her executive summary last summer, Superintendent of Schools Mary Fox-Alter wrote that the district would be maximizing the capacity of its air handling units, roof-top units and/or classroom vents. It installed high-quality MERV filters, which goes beyond the state requirement.

In the middle school, where there were older systems in some of the original classrooms, the district installed HEPA air handling purification units.

"I am looking for reliable scientific evidence," Yasinski told the board.

She cited the Food and Drug Administration's April 2020 statement about Emergency Use Authorization relating to non-surgical face masks saying "labeling should not state or imply that the product is intended for antimicrobial or antiviral protection or related uses or is for use such as infection prevention or reduction, nor should it be used for particulate filtration."

"Masks do not kill viruses," Yasinski said. "And misrepresenting the use for masks intended for antimicrobial or antiviral protection is deceptive."

Norton, the mother of three young children, two in elementary school and one in preschool, criticized the negative consequences of young children wearing masks, with some having difficulty learning to read.

"Imagine trying to learn how to read when you can't see the teacher's face," Norton said. "That's a great impediment to my children's learning. So there is a failure happening."

Crediting the district for making what she called a "valiant effort" to educate children, she added "We all have the same objective. However, it must be said how our children are getting the short end of the stick this entire time."

Fox-Alter said she respected both women's questions and added that the district had to follow the original mask mandate ordered by the governor and the state Education Department and shared by all agencies including the Westchester Department of Health.

"However, I do agree with you and many here agree with you that your questions about metrics are all incredibly valid and that some level of understanding of when and how long this will continue. That's an important question," Fox-Alter said.

While Fox-Alter said the district will follow the law, it has been in contact with the county health department and the state about testing protocols. Other professional organizations are asking the state the same questions.

Fox-Alter offered to share both women's information with County Executive George Latimer and with other professional organizations she meets with regularly.

Sharing a Special Gift

The Bedford-Armonk Rotary Club shared the gift of reading by donating 500 new children's books to Open Door Family Medical Center and Northern Westchester Hospital.

This fall, the Rotary Club met at the home of Immediate Past President Abbot Fleur to organize books, apply bookplates, enjoy fellowship and promote literacy. On Oct. 24, club members distributed the books to Open Door and additional books will be delivered to Northern Westchester Hospital ahead of the holiday season.

New Organization Provides First Steps to Help Domestic Violence Survivors

By Martin Wilbur

When the warnings were sounded in the early days of the pandemic to shelter in place, a chill went down Jacquetta Jenkins' spine.

At five years old, Jenkins' mother removed her and her younger sister from their home in Mount Vernon to escape domestic violence. The pandemic proved to be the impetus for her to help others who had been in a similar situation as her family, knowing that there were going to be residents who would have to choose between the health danger of COVID-19 or the physical threats from a violent home situation.

"I couldn't imagine sheltering in place back then when we grew up, and so I wanted to do something to help domestic violence survivors and their children, but I really didn't know what that looked like," said Jenkins.

By last February she had officially launched the nonprofit organization First Steps to Heal, which provides immediate assistance to low-income Westchester residents with minor children who must leave their home to escape violence.

With the help of the Westchester County Office of Economic Development's accelerator program Launch1000, which lends support to county residents looking to create new businesses or nonprofits, Jenkins created First Steps to Heal. Thus far, she has partnered with four hotels in the county to provide a safe haven for a parent with children. Extended stays could last from one to six months, which takes victims out of a dangerous situation and gives them time to find a stable situation somewhere else.

"I asked them what they needed most when they needed to leave a violent situation," explained Jenkins, who formerly worked for the Mount Vernon School District and currently lives in Elmsford. "They told me emergency shelter, more emergency shelters were needed. But not just in a shelter facility. There are a lot of survivors staying in their situation because they didn't want to go into a shelter, they couldn't imagine bringing themselves and their children into a shelter facility."

Jenkins has also formed partnerships with other organizations, such as My Sister's Place, which provides legal assistance, case management and shelter to abuse victims. The partnership organizations refer people in desperate need of help to First Steps to Heal.

Domestic violence only got worse when the pandemic hit in March 2020. Incidents surged 8.1 percent across the United States after the pandemic-related lockdowns were imposed, according to the National Commission on COVID-19 and Criminal Justice.

The problem in Westchester is acute, as there are more than 12,000 reported domestic violence incidents each year in the county. Westchester ranks second in domestic violence child homicides in the state, only behind New York City, Jenkins said.

It also cuts across all socioeconomic lines, she noted, with 11 of the last 15 domestic violence-related homicides in the county occurring in the five most affluent towns.

Since its launch nine months ago, the organization has helped four families directly and has initial funding to assist 40 survivors and 120 children.

In addition to procuring grants and donations, Jenkins is also striving to increase the roster of participating hotels. Some of the hotels also provide food for the survivors.

She also wants to eventually help families permanently relocate into affordable housing so they can move on with their lives and don't have to return to a violent situation. But the shortage of affordable units makes that challenging.

"I'm very confident that in the coming years, we'll be able to provide that piece, that affordable permanent housing piece to our clients, because when you think about it, when our survivors are ready to transition out of the hotel and their own affordable units, they have to wait anywhere from three to five years," Jenkins said.

She also hopes to expand First Steps to Heal into Putnam and Rockland counties, but wants to make sure that the organization is on strong footing before venturing outside Westchester.

Currently, the organization is based in Mount Vernon, located in office space donated by Macquesten Development.

To progress from an idea to creation within a year, First Steps to Heal has been an incredibly fulfilling experience to help families in the same situation she found herself in as a child, Jenkins said.

"I told myself I don't know how successful we are going to be with ultimately saving people, but I know if I can save one person, then I can do it a million times," Jenkins said. "So those four families, they validated, this is possible, this can be done with my work, with the partnerships with both the hotels and the other organizations."

Westchester Pitches Vaccine to Parents of Younger Children

By Martin Wilbur

Westchester County health officials appealed to parents of 5- to 11-year-olds on Monday to consider having their children receive Pfizer's COVID-19 vaccination to prevent spread and increase the likelihood of them remaining in school.

Health Commissioner Dr. Sherlita Amler and county Board of Health chair Dr. Robert Baker said there are good reasons for getting children inoculated, including protecting any older relatives such as grandparents, that they may come in contact with.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration gave the green light for the overwhelming majority of the youngest public school students to receive the vaccine on Nov. 2.

"I think it's important for us to remember that children are at least as likely to get COVID as adults and, in fact, children five to 11 years of age are at risk for serious illness if they get COVID," Amler said.

More than 8,300 children in that age group have been hospitalized nationwide since the start of the pandemic through mid-October, she said. In Westchester, 5- to 11-year-olds comprise about 9 percent of all COVID-19 positive cases.

Risk of side effects are mild, similar to adults, according to Amler. There would most likely be arm soreness in the area where the shot was administered or a chance of a mild fever, but little more than what a child might experience from other vaccines, she said. If there are symptoms more serious than that, parents should contact their pediatrician.

She said one significant advantage for a child to get the vaccine is if they are exposed to COVID and have been vaccinated, as long as they have no symptoms they can continue to attend in-person classes and avoid quarantine. Another is to protect older family members who could be at greater risk for serious illness if they tested positive for COVID-19.

Baker, who had his 10-year-old son Aaron and nine-year-old daughter Sophie vaccinated, said getting their peers to get the shot may be one of the last significant hurdles to return to normal.

"I think this vaccine is very important for this age group," Baker said. "This will change the direction of the pandemic. It's the last age group of significant spread that we really haven't had some penetration of the vaccine into it and now we're getting it."

County Executive George Latimer said county officials will work with local districts to coordinate pop-up vaccination sites for schools should they want to participate. He also called on each district to survey their parents with children in the 5- to 11-year-old age group to gauge the interest.

The county Department of Health clinics at 134 Court St. in White Plains and 20 S. Broadway in Yonkers will administer shots to children. Parents can find pharmacies or ask their pediatrician if their office has the vaccine. They may also visit the state Department of Health website to learn where vaccines for children are being administered in their area.

The emphasis on children comes as the county vaccination rate stands at just over 91 percent for residents 18 years old and up," Latimer said. The number of active cases in the county has been stagnant at about 1,100 for the past few weeks, he added.

While that is down from the August highs this summer of about 2,800 cases, Latimer said it bears watching because most residents are spending more time indoors as the weather turns colder.

"We are in a period of time of transition because we're leaving the fall season (and) entering the winter season, more of our activities are going to be indoors, which may open the door for us to have some concerns about greater spread," Latimer said.

Not Everyone is in a Position to Support Restaurants

Re: "Support Your Favorite Local Restaurants, Especially for Restaurant Week," by Larry Penner (Nov. 2-8).

While the author's letter may be well-intentioned, I find it to be extremely tunnel-visionsed.

Much of this country cannot afford to eat out and tip 20 percent. When I was supporting two children and a wife, it was everything I could do to keep a roof over our heads and food on the table. Now that I'm divorced, child support long over, one child grown and completely independent and another semi-grown and semi-independent, I have a few discretionary dollars. I still look for the cheapest gasoline, shop in discount stores, look for sales on coffee. I can't afford to eat out regularly.

The author worked for 31 years for the Federal Transit Administration (FTA). I doubt he's affluent, but also doubt he's hurting financially. I don't begrudge any level of financial comfort the author has attained. I do begrudge, and mightily, him not understanding that not everyone is as well off as he is.

My heart aches for those in the restaurant industry hurt by the pandemic. But I refuse to be guilted into spending my money at restaurants. The problem was not of my making, nor is the solution.

Here are two interesting questions. First, is the author himself going to go to the Hudson Valley to support restaurants? And second, how is he going to get there?

Every year around Earth Day he publishes a letter, urging everyone to take public transportation. Is he going to get from Great Neck to the Hudson Valley via public transport?

Correction

In last week's article concerning the recent passage of the Mount Kisco leaf blower legislation, the story inadvertently neglected to add that the seasonal prohibition of gas-powered leaf blowers from May 1 to Sept. 15 will not go into effect until 2024. The Examiner regrets the omission.

Stepinac Blood Drive Results in More Than 50 Pints Donated

Students, administrators, faculty, staff, parents and supporters donated 51 pints of blood in Stepinac High School's recent drive to benefit the New York Blood Center (NYBC).

Since each donated pint can save three lives, according to the NYBC, Stepinac's total contribution can potentially be used to save 153 lives, including cancer patients, accident, burn and trauma victims, newborn babies, mothers delivering babies, transplant recipients, surgery patients and others in need. The Blood Center also notes that 4.5 million Americans receive blood transfusions each year and 40,000 pints are transfused each day in the United States.

Much of today's sophisticated medical care (transplants, heart surgeries, etc.) relies on blood transfusions. Car accident and trauma victims may need as many as 50 or more red cell transfusions and severe burn victims may need as many as 20 platelet transfusions.

For more information or to make an appointment to donate blood, call 800-933-2566 or visit www.nybloodcenter.org/

The Dangers of Thinking That Elections Are Rigged or Stolen

Donald Trump has repeatedly said that our elections are rigged and that there is massive voter fraud.

In Putnam Valley, there are more registered Democrats than Republicans. And Donald Trump has repeatedly said that our elections are rigged and that there is massive voter fraud, and I don't hear Republicans disagreeing with him.

In Putnam Valley the election results tell us that Republicans trounced the Democrats. How can I believe that when Donald Trump has repeatedly said that our elections are rigged and that there is massive voter fraud, and the rest of the party does not disagree? I don't hear the Republicans disagreeing with him.

I charge the Republicans with stealing the election in Putnam Valley and, for that matter, all of Putnam County. Because Donald Trump has repeatedly said that our elections are rigged and there is massive voter fraud! How can I think otherwise?

The corrupt Republican Party just stole Putnam Valley and Putnam County. All their victories are illegitimate. Why? Because Donald Trump has said so and the rest of the Republican Party does not refute him. So, obviously, in Putnam, the election was stolen.

Get it? Do you see how dangerous this is?

A Time of Year to Be Thankful for Everything That We Have

A time to be grateful for so many things in our lives, grateful for our families when we gather around the Thanksgiving table and let's not forget those who we lost this year and comfort those they have left behind. Let's be grateful for our precious children and grandchildren, those of us who are so blessed.

We give thanks for our community and to all of the men and women on the front line and to those who volunteer in so many ways to make Cortlandt such a great place to live and to raise our families. We give praise to our volunteers who are very dedicated. To our police, firefighters, EMTs, paramedics and to our military for defending our country. We are grateful.

I am so thankful for the 34 years of support and trust I've received to be first a councilwoman (four years) and then as town supervisor (30 years). I have always tried my best to live up to that trust and to work hard every day to improve the quality of life in our community. Cortlandt is not just a place, it's home. I have cherished every day as supervisor and have taken this responsibility very seriously.

Thanksgiving for me has always been a day of joy, smiles, good food and a day of renewal as we remember our past days and those we've loved and lost but to always go forward and think about what we can do for others in the present and future.

Please join me in giving thanks for our lives, our community and for those we love. Happy Thanksgiving!

New Croton-Harmon Superintendent of Schools Named

By Rick Pezullo

The Croton-Harmon School District has announced that Stephen Walker has accepted the role of superintendent of schools.

The Board of Education unanimously approved Walker's contract last week. He will take over on Jan. 4, replacing Dr. Deborah O'Connell, who has served as superintendent for four years and will be officially retiring on Jan. 3.

"I am incredibly honored to have been selected as the next superintendent of the Croton-Harmon schools," Walker said. "The district is renowned for its high achievement, forward-thinking culture and focus on educating the whole child, and I am excited to get to know and work with the faculty and staff, students and the broader community."

Walker joins Croton-Harmon from Sullivan West Central School District in Sullivan County, a roughly 1,100-student district where he has served as superintendent since August 2018. In that role, Walker oversaw advancements in technology and social emotional learning, including the creation of an instructional technology facilitator position in each school and the incorporation of a specialized middle school program within the district's secondary school.

He also helped develop several innovative high school classes, including cybersecurity, drone production, social justice and the Advanced Placement seminar.

"Throughout his career, Mr. Walker has championed a student-centered approach, Stephen Walker was appointed by the Croton-Harmon Board of Education to become the district's new superintendent on Jan. 4.

Norman Leaves GW Elementary School for New Role in Lakeland

By Rick Pezullo

Dr. Tracy Norman recently left his longtime position as principal of George Washington Elementary School to begin a new role as acting assistant superintendent of instruction in the Lakeland School District.

Norman, who has worked in the district for 21 years, assumed his new job on Oct. 25 and was replaced at George Washington by Marc Casey, who has been an assistant principal at Copper Beech Middle School since 2015.

"He is a passionate advocate for all students and an accomplished leader in our district," said Karen Gagliardi, Lakeland's interim superintendent of schools. "I am confident that Dr. Norman will make great strides in his new role."

Norman, a major in the Army National Guard, said it was an honor serving as principal of George Washington for 19 years.

He said he had mixed emotions about making the switch.

"Over the years I have enjoyed the many wonderful and challenging experiences of serving as the principal of George Washington Elementary," Norman said. "At this time, my career ambitions and desire to make change for the greater good of the Lakeland community make it necessary to accept the position of acting assistant superintendent of instruction."

"I will always be grateful for the cooperation and support of the Board of Education, district office administration and the George Washington faculty and staff. I am particularly grateful to all the parents, both present and past, for your years of partnership and service to the children of the George Washington community," he added.

ensuring equity in education for all learners and essential professional development for faculty and staff," said Croton-Harmon Board of Education President Sarah Carrier. "Throughout the interview process, board members were continually impressed by his experience, measurable successes, and positive energy."

Prior to his position at Sullivan West, Walker was deputy superintendent and assistant superintendent for human resources at the Suffern Central School District in Rockland County. He has also held the position of director of pupil personnel services in Suffern and in the Marlboro Central School District, where Walker began his career as a special education teacher and principal.

Thank you, Yorktown voters.

I am honored to have earned your support and look forward to serving as Yorktown Town Justice.

It will be my privilege to serve my hometown as a tough, fair, and compassionate jurist.

Local Author Writes the Ultimate John Wayne Quote Book

By Martin Wilbur

Mark Orwoll has been an enormous John Wayne fan since childhood, so it isn't surprising that he would write a book about the Duke, one of the most celebrated Hollywood actors.

But the 26-year Pleasantville resident didn't pen a biography or delve into Wayne's personal life. Orwoll strictly focused on the larger-than-life figure's quotes and lines from his voluminous filmography in his book, "John Wayne Speaks," that is scheduled for release by St. Martin's Griffin this week.

Despite being deceased for more than 40 years, Orwoll believes that John Wayne remains a highly appealing actor and person because he was such a strong and versatile performer who stood out in voice and stature.

Along with his many westerns, people sometimes forget Wayne played a leading man during his earlier career and appeared in lighter films as well, he said.

"There are a few actors who have the ability to project the sense of authority, of understanding, and yet also are not braggadocious, they're not Sylvester Stallone, let's put it that way," Orwoll said. "They are reluctant heroes, and I think John Wayne definitely falls into that camp. He does not walk into a room and says, 'Hey, everybody, look at me.' In fact, he does exactly the opposite."

Orwoll brings in the famous lines, the obscure and everything in between, often prefacing them with context and sometimes including them with dialogue from another actor. Each John Wayne quote is annotated with a footnote, and the reader can look in Appendix B to find in which movie the line was spoken.

"Honey, this is strictly from Brooklyn, but why don't you dance with the guy that brung ya?" he stated in the 1944 film "The Fighting Seabees." Or this gem from "True Grit" in 1969, in which Wayne captured the Oscar for best actor: "I know him – well. I shot him in the lip last August over at Winding Stair Mountains. He was lucky that day, all right. My shootin' was off."

Orwoll divided each of the 19 chapters by category of quotes, such as How to Woo a Gal, In Service to His County, which centered on patriotism, war and life in uniform, and Make Mine a Double. There is one chapter near the end that includes John Wayne quotes from interviews, speeches and public appearances.

What's fascinating about Orwoll's work, in which he watched every one of Wayne's 173 credited roles that spanned 50 years (although the early Wayne movies were silent films), is what is not included in the book. There are perhaps dozens of lines that have been attributed to Wayne over the years, even though he never uttered them, Orwoll said.

There's no "A man's gotta do what a man's gotta do" or "Courage is being scared to death but saddling up anyway." Wayne happens to be in that small pantheon of famous people where his name evokes a certain mythology.

Mark Orwoll, author of the just released book "John Wayne Speaks."

"I'm going to guarantee you that any quote in here could be attributed to a specific movie," said Orwoll, a former editor at Travel + Leisure for 30 years who is currently a freelance travel writer. "I felt like I had to do that for John Wayne fans, and for myself. Enough of these made-up quotations."

Orwoll believes John Wayne fans will enjoy the book as will people who love Hollywood, particularly its Golden Age after World War II. He said many teenagers and younger adults are familiar with Wayne through their parents or grandparents.

In fact, Orwoll contacted Brian Downes, who runs the John Wayne Birthplace Museum in the actor's hometown of Winterset, Iowa, to inform him he had written the book. Downes wrote back, "Does it include the quote 'Life is tough, it's tougher if you're stupid?'"

"I wrote back (that) John Wayne never said that," Orwoll recalled. "He wrote back a one-sentence response: 'Send me the book.'"

For Orwoll, some of his favorite John Wayne movies were from the heart of his career, including "Fort Apache," "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon" and almost anything else directed by John Ford.

He doesn't apologize for enjoying the actor's work, even though he acknowledges some of the moves would never be made today. Orwoll, who identifies as a liberal Democrat, also doesn't get into Wayne's politics.

"If you're not able to separate an artistic product from the actual human being's history, who created it, then you're going to have a lot of wonderful artistry in this world that is off limits to you," Orwoll said.

He also made sure to credit the screenwriters who wrote the lines.

What turned out as "a contagion-inspired compendium" while being homebound during the pandemic has received strong feedback.

"I'm very proud of the book," Orwoll said.

Feeling Safe at Home: Does it Take a Gun?

The pandemic has inspired a surge in gun sales, I have read, not really understanding why. But research shows that having firearms in the house won't necessarily help in a dangerous moment –and it can heighten other risks, such as accidents with children finding them.

Discussions about guns and their safety or dangers have also been sparked by the recent accident on the Alec Baldwin movie set for the film "Rust," where a crew member was killed when the gun Baldwin was firing was somehow loaded with real bullets rather than blanks.

Early in my career, I applied for a job with a public relations agency where the interviewer told me that the job had become available when a former account executive had walked off the job when it came time for him to board a plane. It seems that he had a fear of flying, which he could not overcome when it came time to visit a client in another city.

The interview was going swimmingly, my emphasizing that I loved to fly, until the wrap-up when I was asked if I happened to have any fears or hang-ups that would prevent me from performing on the job. I volunteered that the only fear I could think of was that of guns. I was quickly dismissed without getting the job after being told that the major account on which I would have served was the U. S. Army!

By Bill Primavera

But I always had that fear of guns, and perhaps I still do today. Maybe it's something from my early childhood, perhaps as young as five or six years old, when my parents took me to the funeral of one of my dad's friends who had been shot with a gun in front of his home in South Philadelphia. In those days – the Dark Ages – funeral homes exposed the whole body, including the shoes, and that poor guy who had been shot left a lasting impression on me that guns were something to be avoided, including owning one.

There was only one time in my family's history when I considered the purchase of a gun. It was when my home in Brooklyn Heights was burglarized while we slept in our beds. Whenever I think about that early morning when my wife awoke and told me that she had dreamt that someone was in our bedroom, looking at us in bed, I get the chills because, in fact, that had been exactly what happened.

When my wife went downstairs to make breakfast, I heard her scream from the kitchen that our back door to the garden had been completely taken off its hinges. In those days, we kept no cash to speak of in the house and the only thing the burglar was able to steal was my daughter's piggy bank. We learned something when we discovered that every single book in our rather large library had been opened. The intruder was obviously checking for hidden cash.

Still, I began fantasizing about what I would have done if I had woken while the burglar was in the house, with the scenarios of my having and not having a gun. If I had a gun under my pillow and awoke, would I have blown him away? Or would I have just said "Hands up?" Probably the latter, but I really don't know, considering the alarm of the moment.

One of my friends suggested that, rather than a gun for home protection, I might consider having a can of wasp spray close to my front and back door. Wasp spray was recommended because it shoots more directly at its intended target. I even mentioned the possibility in one of my columns, only to have a reader upbraid me by saying, "Right, go blind another person, then see how you feel."

Considering the pros and cons of having a gun in the house, I suppose I would recommend to others that they invest instead in a quality home security system to protect themselves from the criminal elements among us, which thankfully are not high in our region.

Creating Memories: SMRA Bird Calendar a Perfect Stocking Stuffer

By Brian Kluepfel

Although there are many reasons to become a birder, probably the primary reason many do so is because birds are visually stunning.

Here in North America, where the number of avian species pales in comparison to global birding hotspots, we still get hundreds of individuals of different colors, sizes and shapes, from the miniscule hummingbird to the magnificent eagle.

During these pandemic times, many of us have been challenged to look both inward and outward. Some of those doing the latter have entered the world of birding, and many of them, the related hobby of bird photography.

Though I have splashed thousands of words across the pages of this and other publications relating the wonder of birds, the stories hardly compare in impact with the power of a photograph. Luckily, local photographers have always come to my rescue in this regard. We often rely on Audubon stalwarts like Suzanne O'Rourke (<https://www.flickr.com/photos/sueorourke>) to add a splash of visual panache to offset my ponderous prose.

Starting last year, the Saw Mill River Audubon (SMRA) began producing a calendar of bird images taken by local photographers which allow us to appreciate the seasonal variety of bird life in the Hudson Valley and tip our collective cap to these talented and patient mavens of the lens.

One relative newbie birder and photographer is Rebecca Bell of Briarcliff Manor, who now posts on Facebook as @Briarcliffphotography. Her stunning image of a red-tailed hawk alighting in her backyard graces the October 2022 calendar page. As she jokingly wrote upon receiving the news, "Bucket list item achieved - I'm finally a calendar girl! Miss October, to be precise!"

Another calendar contributor is Mitch Goldfarb, whose photos will grace the April and August pages. Goldfarb moved up to Westchester during the pandemic, and an old bird feeder in his parents' garage and a camera of more recent vintage got him started. Beginning with colorful species like the American goldfinch and the pileated woodpecker, he has now catalogued 230 species in the tristate area.

Goldfarb credits his friends at SMRA with much of his success.

"I'm constantly learning," he said. "So much of that is thanks to the fantastic programs and people involved with the Saw Mill River Audubon, which continues to be an amazing resource and way to connect with other people who share a love of birds," he said.

While many would like to get the ultimate snap of a beautiful bird, there are limits. The golden rule of birding photography is "do no harm." Remember that these are wild creatures trying to survive and feed their young. Audubon has published guidance for ethical bird photography on its website at <https://www.audubon.org/get-outside/audubons-guide-ethical-bird-photography>.

I'd like to dedicate this month's column to Pleasantville photographer Jeff Seneca, who was well-respected in the local birding community for his wonderful images (<https://www.jsenecaphotography.com/>) and all-round personality. We lost Jeff in the early days of the pandemic and we miss him tremendously. To quote his website: "Jeff lived his life in the manner of his pictures, vibrantly and full of life and color."

SMRA Executive Director Anne Swaim added, "We started the Birds of New York calendar to highlight the work of local bird photographers and the beauty and diversity of the birds found in our area. Our first calendar was for 2021 and featured two spectacular pictures by Jeff Seneca, one of the leading bird photographers in our area who was lost, much too young, to COVID in April 2020."

Another wonderful photographer and personality lost in 2020 was Croton-on-Hudson's Edward Mertz, whose appreciation of Westchester wildlife was contagious. Luckily for us, these men live on through their photographs.

Feel free to buy one, or several, 2022 Saw Mill River Audubon calendars at www.sawmillriveraudubon.org/calendar.

Brian Kluepfel is a longstanding Saw Mill River Audubon member and encourages you to support efforts in protecting and enjoying local wildlife habitats. Visit SMRA sanctuaries and attend their events, online or in person. All are welcome.

It's Best to Think of Daydreaming as Theater of the Mind

"And you can be sure that if you're feeling right

*A daydream will last long into the night
Tomorrow at breakfast you may prick up your ears*

Or you may be daydreaming for a thousand years"

--John Sebastian

Writing is my profession though daydreaming is my full-time job.

Like most artists, and as an existentialist, I find my creativity in daydreaming, though one does not have to be an artist or an existentialist to daydream.

Daydreaming can be viewed as the theater of the mind since this is where we stage our life's ambitions, fantasies and even create new realities. Anecdotal, mind-wandering has been associated with creativity for centuries. New research on daydreaming is offering validation that mind-wandering can make us happier and more creative.

"I was trying to daydream, but my mind kept wandering"

--Steven Wright

To master the art of daydreaming, one must avoid constrained thoughts where we ruminate over unpleasant events and topics. And, to focus on thoughts that are free-moving, meaning they skip from one pleasant topic to another. Positive mind-wandering has also been shown to enhance convergent thinking; that facilitates the kind of solution that just comes to you as a "a-ha" moment in a flash, not knowing how we got there.

I have personally experienced such moments. A solution in the flash that trumps methodical testing and elimination of options.

"Sit in reverie and watch the changing color of the waves that break upon the idle seashore of the mind"

--Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

Current research shows when our minds wandered in more fantastical ways, like playing out implausible or bizarre, funny scenarios, we tend to be more inspired and creative and it elevates our mood. This is especially true for writers since we think through stories as means to harness our creativity to find our a-ha moments. Artists use these moments to present works to our audiences in the hope they will experience a catharsis brought on by our work.

"Daydream, imagine, and reflect. It's the source of infinite creativity"

--Deepak Chopra

As mentioned, one does not need to be an artist or existentialist to daydream. Taking an existential view to crafting our dreams may help us to better frame and navigate our life experience; especially when we consider all the possible things to think about, for many the negative possibilities outnumber the positive ones.

And, if we think of higher unobtainable goals, the higher the possibility of disappointment. If we create elusive realities in our daydreams, we find we are only living in our own nightmares. As Pascal said, humans may be as fragile as reeds, but they are thinking beings; in their consciousness they reflect the immensity of the universe.

Existentialism is the attempt to transmute our mere existence into essence, no easy task for sure. For life is full of adversity, and at times can be outright cruel. It's this absurdity that we need to overcome life's adversity, in some degree through creating positive daydreams by taking a more existential view of life.

Existentialism is concerned with ontology, the study of being, and makes no claims to be a comprehensive philosophy or way of life, but an endeavor to grasp the reality and adversity of life. It does not paint life with rose-colored glasses, and quoting the philosopher Sartre, we are the result of our choices. True, we must address life's realities and adversities during our waking thoughts to address our material needs, but we also have the choice to daydream with free-moving positive thoughts to counter our negative impulses.

In closing, I'm an artist, existentialist and oftentimes a procrastinator – more often than I like to admit. So, as I was ruminating about my editor's deadline, I took a break to do some positive mind-wandering, and low and behold, I had my a-ha moment. Just in time to meet my deadline.

Be well. Be safe. Be happy. Be nice. Amor fati!

Winning the War of Ideas on the Afghan Battlefield

A Scarsdale lawyer teamed with an Iraqi refugee and an immigrant from Singapore to create a non-profit that brings liberal ideas to the Arab world. Their next mission: Afghanistan

Two months after the final American troops left Afghanistan, the media and much of America have moved on. The initial wave of intensive coverage has long since abated, even as the threat to the thousands of Afghans still trapped in Afghanistan who worked with American troops remains.

But as American forces left the country, New York-based non-profit Ideas Beyond Borders has stepped in to support the Afghans left behind. IBB, an anti-extremism organization focused primarily on translating books and articles from English into Arabic, has dramatically scaled up its operations in Afghanistan. It is now translating works into Dari and Pashto and helping Afghans who worked with Americans escape, with an eye towards supporting women's education in the country.

The organization has hired more than 60 editors, publishers, and proofreaders in Afghanistan to provide translation and other services, and plans to hire more in the future. The translators began their work last month and have already translated more than 160 articles. "These are the people who were left behind by the US withdrawal. They are the ones that are joining our team," Faisal Saeed Al Mutar, the president and founder of IBB, says. "They support a lot of the values that many Americans support."

Al Mutar launched Ideas Beyond Borders in 2017 with Melissa Chen, a journalist and an immigrant from Singapore. The organization, which relies on private donors to fund its $1.8 million in annual spending, runs several initiatives. Its flagship program, called one of Time's most influential people in the world, and former Reason editor-in-chief Nick Gillespie. The board chairman is Scarsdale resident Sam Hershey, a restructuring litigator at White & Case.

IBB's board includes Steven Pinker, a Canadian psychologist once named

The Opposite of Vegas

An Iraqi refugee, Al Mutar understands the importance of both combating extremism and promoting free thought in the Middle East. Now 30, he grew up under the rule of Saddam Hussein and saw his reality shaped by the dictator's regime-run media.

"All of the information, and I mean all of it, was controlled by the state," he recalls. "The punishment for acquiring information outside of the country, through satellite television or radio, was either jail or death."

The climate following Saddam's removal was not much better; Al Mutar says the country went ...

Enjoy the Holiday Train Show Followed By Some Great Eats

The glittering 30th annual Holiday Train Show is on track to start on Nov. 20 and run through Jan. 23 at the New York Botanical Garden in the Bronx near Fordham University.

It's a seasonal treat, a must for the young and the young at heart. Thousands of Westchester residents, myself included, look forward to visiting the Botanical Garden, walking through the beautifully restored Enid Haupt Conservatory and seeing the seductive floral arrangements and dramatic plantings. It is one of the first Christmas events of the season.

There are themed dining pavilions throughout the park and near the Enid Haupt Pavilion – the casual Pine Tree Café and Hudson Garden Grill. Open daily. Early dining is recommended since the hours are until 6 p.m. most days and until 10:30 p.m. on certain dates.

For more information, call 646-627-7711 or 718-817-8700. For info on the train show, including times and tickets, visit www.nybg.org.

After taking in all that beauty, we do get hungry. Here are some tasty options on your way home.

By Morris Gut

Mario's

Arthur Avenue is just a stone's throw from the Botanical Garden. Since 1919, five generations of the Migliucci family have worked the front and back of the house, making sure patrons are taken care of at this venerable Little Italy institution. Amiable Regina Migliucci is at the helm.

For starters, enjoy the palate-pleasing lagnappe of marinated carrots, hot peppers and crusty Arthur Avenue bread. Great appetizers include the hot antipasto platter for two and the Spiedini al la Romana (skewered deep-fried mozzarella sandwiches).

Move on to entrees such as the penne rustica with sausage; stuffed braciola napoletana; osso bucco the size of Mount Vesuvius; or the traditional chicken parmigiana.

Open Tuesday through Sunday. There's a free parking lot and valet service.

Mario's is located at 2342 Arthur Ave. in the Bronx. Info: 718-584-1188 or visit www.mariosrestarthurave.com.

Artie's Steak & Seafood

There is an enhanced craft beer list as well as specialty cocktails and wines by the glass. There are also big combination platters to share, a loaded lobster salad roll at lunch and a deluxe-size hamburger platter.

The hot antipasto platter for two at Mario's on Arthur Avenue, one of the many restaurants to visit if you're going to the New York Botanical Garden's Holiday Train Show this holiday season.

Owner Spiro Chagares and his staff offer patrons a fine melding of traditional and contemporary dishes served with flair. Sit back in one of several dining areas and enjoy delectable lamb sliders; hearty seafood chowder; a seafood platter for two; tender short rib; a massive Zuppa Di Pesce; tender oven roasted rack of lamb; American shellfish jambalaya; chardonnay poached salmon with seafood; and fresh lobster prepared in a variety of styles.

Check out the bar and lounge in the evening for good networking. Open seven days. Free parking.

Artie's Steak & Seafood is located at 394 City Island Ave. in the Bronx. Info: 718-885-9885 or visit www.artiescityisland.com.

Jack's Bar

Jack's is the new kid on the block – and a darn good one, too. Seasonal decorations are up, and owner Shane Clifford has been drawing a fine crowd. It has been remodeled and offers an enhanced Irish-American tavern menu on steroids. That's the best way to describe it.

Generous specialties coming out of Chef Brendan Donohoe's kitchen include spicy chicken ranch pizza; pepperoni and salami calzone; half roasted duck; decadent short rib mac and cheese; Jack's meatballs; burrata pizza cooked in their wood-fired oven; Berkshire pork chop; and grilled lamb sliders. The staff could not be friendlier.

Open daily. There's indoor and outdoor seating and televisions to watch. Municipal parking is free in the evenings.

Jack's Bar is located at 219 Main St. in Eastchester. Info: 914-652-7650 or visit www.jackseastchester.com.

Maria

Two-time winners of Michelin's prestigious Bib Gourmet Award, brothers Peter and Giovanni Cucullo have been causing a stir in New Rochelle, drawing patronage from all over Westchester for their flavorful riff on Italian and global cooking. I love their happy hours from 3 to 7 p.m. when they offer favorite beverages and small plates that are loaded with flavor.

I am already hooked on eclectic dishes like the glazed pork ribs, truffled green beans, grilled sausage with sweet and spicy Peruvian peppers, meatballs, cauliflower fritters and roasted shishito peppers.

A comfy dining room and bar is filled with artifacts from Mom. Friendly staff, too. The family also operates the bustling Fratelli Pizza & Pasta next door. Open Tuesday through Sunday.

Gusto Pizza

David Masliah and Chef Erwen Perez of Encore have opened an artisanal pizza shop next to their popular bistro. One taste of their pies and your palate will fly off to foodie heaven.

The imported wood-burning pizza oven is named Victor, after David's father, who was a pizzaiolo in France for many years. There's wine by the glass, appetizers, salads and delicious personal-size pizzas

This high-end Italian steakhouse offers classic cuts of prime beef and chops along with a hearty helping of Italian-American specialties. Tony Lala and his crew will take good care of you.

Be seated in the handsomely renovated dining room and bar and lounge and peruse the menu over a glass of wine. There are diver scallops, steak tartare, slabs of Canadian bacon, spaghetti carbonara, pappardelle with short rib Ragu, zuppa di pesce and even a classic burger to enjoy. Carnivores should consider the lamb chops, veal chop or New York strip steak.

Mughal Palace

Owner Mohammad Alam serves a delicious variety of regional Indian specialties. Look for the Lasuni Gobi (cauliflower florets tossed with bell peppers, onion, garlic and green herbs); chicken barbecue kabab (marinated boneless chicken cooked in the tandoor oven); lamb bhuna (pieces of lamb cooked in a medium-spiced sauce of bell peppers, tomatoes and fresh Indian herbs); and mango chicken (boneless chunks of chicken cooked with fresh mango, ginger, garlic and dry spices). Dying is Not the Problem!

Dear Mr. Di Costanzo: Is having a Last Will and Testament enough?

When I meet with individuals regarding their estate planning needs, I am often asked to "put their affairs in order." In most cases, they are asking for a Last Will and Testament. You might be surprised, however, to learn that a will might be the least important document in your estate plan.

Understand that a will only takes effect upon your death. Until your death, it has no legal significance.

While planning for the orderly disposition of your assets upon your death is important, planning for your disability or incapacity is of greater importance. If you fall ill and have taken no action to protect or preserve your assets, you run the risk of losing them to the cost of long-term care. As such, one of the most utilized and sought-after planning techniques of an elder law attorney is the Medicaid trust.

A Medicaid asset protection trust is paramount to a will. In fact, a power of attorney is paramount to a will. Without proper asset protection planning, there may be no assets to pass to your heirs under a will. For the above reasons, an estate plan that only considers a will may be deficient.

Wine in the Time of Jesus – and in Today’s Catholic Mass

By Nick Antonaccio

Last week, I attempted to follow the history and antecedent practices leading to today’s Christian celebration of the Eucharist, the celebration of Christ’s Last Supper.

In this week’s column, I address the two questions I left unanswered: Which wine did Christ likely consume during his life on earth? What type of wine do we consume at mass in the 21st century?

Christ’s wine? The four gospel writers don’t mention a specific varietal, vintage or producer. That is not unusual. In all likelihood, it was the house wine that was served in that upper dining room as Christ and his disciples reclined at the table – Christ’s last supper.

Fast forward to today’s restaurant dining experiences. Do you remember the wine served to you the last time you ordered “a carafe of the house red?” Wine was a natural accompaniment to food in Christ’s time, not enjoyed as a pairing experience with the course at hand.

There were a number of grape varietals growing in the Mideast in Christ’s time. The Greeks and Romans had occupied these lands for centuries, introducing their culture and traditions to the local populace. They planted grapes for winemaking and imported finished wines from their vast domains to supplement locally produced wines.

Recent archeological discoveries in the Mideast may hold the secret of grapes grown in Christ’s time. Remnants of a winery structure, wine-stained vessels and 1,500-year-old seeds are being analyzed to unlock their DNA.

So what wine did Jesus drink? There is no documented proof of a particular grape, but speculation is boundless. Several researchers have posited that it was likely a grape with origins in ancient Greece – and which was transplanted to fields around the region of Palestine, including Judea where Jesus lived. Therefore, it may have been the Assyrtiko grape, a red grape still cultivated in Greece today. Yet speculation should not blur our focus on the symbolism of partaking of sacramental wine, rather than its oenological DNA.

The 21st century offerings at Roman Catholic masses bear little resemblance to ancient wines. Across the globe, modern wines are of a higher quality, with more discerning taste and aroma profiles.

Except in church.

For Catholics, the prescripts for the production of sacramental wines are codified in the Code of Canon Law. Published in 1983, it dictates that the wine for the Eucharist must be natural and pure, from the fruit of the vine and not corrupt – to which a small quantity of water is to be added (my paraphrasing).

What is served might be termed “ecumenical wine.” No particular grape is specified. The grape may differ in each locale across the globe, but the essence and spirit of the wine is the same.

Here in the United States, two wine companies supply more than 80 percent of sacramental wine to churches (made in accordance with the Code of Canon Law). They offer a number of choices, yet names printed on the bottle labels tend to be more brand-related than varietal type. Names such as Tokay, Burgundy and Port are generic descriptors not alluding to the contents, which are rarely disclosed.

There are three basic categories: dry, light and sweet, the latter being the most prevalent). These wines typically are a proprietary blend of California grapes that result in a red, or orange, or yellow, or amber, or brown, or pink wine.

The most widely grown blending grapes are Chenin Blanc, French Colombard, Chardonnay, Petit Syrah, Zinfandel, Cabernet Sauvignon – and in many instances an underpinning of Thomson seedless grapes. Many are fortified with natural brandy or alcohol (as a preservative). The limit mandated for alcohol content is 18 percent. They typically are screw-cap bottles costing under $7 each, but don’t look for them in your local wine shop; they’re generally sold only to churches.

Christians seeking the certainty of consuming a natural, organic wine with no additives and a long history of ancient practices and symbolic legacy need look no further than their local church. One caveat: whether it meets your personal preferences and taste should not be a criterion.
